Vaughan Aided Racetrack, Probers Told

16 Million Capitol Hill Light, Heat Plan Ready

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A $16,440,000 program for modernizing the lighting, heating and air-conditioning systems of the buildings on Capitol Hill has been prepared for Congress, it was learned yesterday.

The project would take about four years. It would cut annual expenses by about $700,000. Legislation to authorize the program has been drafted, and may be introduced in the House soon.

A major effect of the proposed program would be to take the Capitol Power Plant, South Capitol and E sts. se., out of the business of furnishing electricity to the congressional buildings, and to turn the business over to the Potomac Electric Power Co. Its estimated annual bill for the service would be about $359,000, of which about $35,000 would return to the Government in taxes.

Studied for Three Years

The program was drafted for the House Office Building Commission, whose members are Speaker Rayburn, Representative Sabath (D., Ill.) and Representative Auchincloss (R., N. J.). It is the outgrowth of a three-year study by engineers in cooperation with Capitol Architect David Lynn, who has recommended early approval.

Many features of the program were approved by the commission in the last Congress, when Representative Martin (R., Mass.), then Speaker, served in Rayburn's present place as chairman.

Highlights of Program

Here are the highlights of the recommended program:

1. That the Government stop generating electricity at the Capitol power plant and buy it from PEPCO.

2. Convert the electric light and power systems of the buildings on Capitol Hill from 25-cycle direct current to 60-cycle alternating current. Estimated cost of this would be $7,600,000 and would require complete rewiring of all buildings.

3. Install two new modern spreader, stoker-fired, coal-burning steam boilers to heat the congressional buildings at a cost of $1,385,000.

4. Build a new tunnel to carry steam and water mains from the Capitol power plant to the Senate

Heat Hits 93, Two Collapse; Hotter Today

Two men in Greater Washington collapsed yesterday as a new heat wave made itself fully felt, and the temperature reached a high of 93.3 degrees at 4:50 p. m.

The official forecast for today is "mostly sunny, high about 95 degrees."

The heat wave, covering a large part of the country, extended as far west as the upper Mississippi and middle Missouri valleys. With one "very small" possible exception, forecasters said, no rain and no relief are in sight for "several days."

Two Victims of Heat

The men who collapsed were:

Romeo Powell, 29, 2 Naylor's ct. nw., a roofer, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for heat cramps.

William Butler, 1417 11th st. nw., truck driver pulled his vehicle to the curb in the 6200 block of Washington blvd., Arlington, and collapsed. He was taken to Arlington Hospital.

Low temperature yesterday was 72 at 6 a. m. Then the mercury climbed steadily, passing 90 at 2 p. m. and remaining above it until after 6 p. m.

An even 93-degree mark was repeated at 4 p. m., 5 p. m. and 6 p. m.

However, Federal officials said that the heat did not cause closing of any Government offices or dismissal of employes.

Crumbs of Comfort

Weather Bureau officials pointed out three facts yesterday from which Washington might glean a small measure of comfort.

1. New York had its hottest August 9 in history, the temperature reaching 97.6 in the city and 99 at LaGuardia Airport.

2. Washington yesterday was almost nine degrees short of its August 9, 1930, record, which was 102 degrees.

3. A mass of cool air is due to come southward from Canada today across New England and get as far south as Delaware Bay. It might — just might — forecasters said, "creep in the back door" and give Washington slight relief late tonight.

Pastor Tells Eerie Tale of 'Haunted' Boy

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

An out-of-this-world story of a "haunted" 13-year-old Washington area boy was reported last night by a clergyman here to a closed session of the Society of Parapsychology.

The minister said he saw a pallet on which the sleeping boy lay slide slowly across the floor until the boy's head bumped against a bed, awakening him.

He said that while he stood over a heavy armchair in which the boy was sitting with his knees drawn under his chin he saw the chair tilt slowly to one side and fall over, throwing the lad upon the floor.

This fabulous case has been described by Dr. J. B. Rhine, director of the famed parapsychology laboratory at Duke University, as "the most impressive" poltergeist (noisy ghost) phenomenon that has come to his attention in his years of investigation into supersensory affairs, Richard C. Darnell, president of the society here, said.

Here is the story related calmly last night by the Washington minister, who requested anonymity:

Early this year the boy's family, members of his congregation, came to him and reported that since January 18 there had been strange doings in their county-suburban house.

Scratchings would come suddenly from the walls and the attic. The bed where the boy slept would suddenly begin to shake violently. Once a picture abruptly jutted out from the wall.

Fruit jumped up from the refrigerator top and hurled itself against the wall—the mother was

British Cash Allotment Cut Sharply

By William Lowe

Paris, Aug. 9 (NYHT).—Britain has been tentatively allotted about 780 million dollars of the Marshall Plan funds available this year. This is little more than half the $1,518,000,000 Britain has stated it needs to stave off economic disaster, it was learned here today.

Experts of the 19-government Organization for European Economic Cooperation, applying a ruthless knife to requests for funds, have also given the western German program a "most severe working over."

In all, they have done their work so forcefully that they have whittled the entire European aid program down to $3,200,000,000 from the $4,566,000,000 they originally hoped to receive. They can expect $3,628,200,000 from the United States. That amount was voted yesterday by the Senate, and the measure will go to a conference committee whose House of Representatives members have already voted a larger sum.

In voting a figure for Britain that erred on the side of pessimism, the OEEC delegates hoped to leave room for last-minute adjustments. All figures are tentative and must still be approved by the OEEC programming committee.

Vandenberg Asks 2-Year Arms Split

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), yesterday suggested dividing the proposed arms aid to western Europe into a 50 per cent cash outlay this fiscal year, with contract authority in 1951 for the rest.

His proposal startled many members on both sides of Congress, who viewed it as a capitulation to the Administration, inasmuch as Vandenberg has been leading the demands to cut the total program costs.

It demonstrated that there is a several-sided split in GOP views on the arms program.

Vandenberg conceded that "in the course of two years, this results in the same total expenditure," for the contract authorizations would require later money outlay.

Would "Divide Impact"

Inasmuch as the Administration plan provides for delivering only about half the proposed arms by June 30, he said, his suggestion would mean "proceeding with greater logic and with greater fundamental fidelity. . . ."

It would "divide the impact," he said, "and confront the budget of 1950 with only that portion it has to pay."

More important, he said, is that it would "gear in" the arms program with the defense council soon to be established under the North Atlantic Treaty.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, who was testifying before the joint Senate Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committee, promptly indicated agreement in principle with the suggestion.

Johnson Concurs

"It's the substance, not the form" that the Administration regards as vital, Johnson said.

"I'm sure," he replied in answer to a question from Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), "the President is interested in doing things . . . rather than the form in which it is done.

". . . The over-all result," said Johnson, "will be that it (the arms program) will move along with the same tempo and to the same extent as though we had the dollars."

One disadvantage to the Administration, however, Johnson conceded, could be that contract authorizations carried over into the 1951 budget would make it harder to obtain new funds later for continuing the arms program.

He already has estimated that

Opportunist's Life Story

Senator's Spilled Gin Started Maragon on Way to Spotlight

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

John Maragon told the story of his life yesterday.

His story began with his birth 55 years ago on the rugged Ionian Island of Santa Maura, off the west coast of Greece. It ended with the current Senate investigation of "5 percenters," in which Maragon finds himself involved.

In between were some extraordinary adventures, in one of which Maragon (to use his own words) "took the rap" for a United States Senator with a leaking suitcase, and was arrested for violation of the Volstead Act.

Later, according to Maragon's story, the lawmaker made up for things handsomely by getting him a job with the old Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, forerunner of the FBI.

Emigrated in 1911

Maragon, who emigrated to the United States in 1911, when he was 13, told of his days as a $6-a-week shoeshine boy in Kansas City, where he had gone to join his older brother, Hector; and then went on to list all the jobs that followed—railroad water boy, news butcher, bellhop, G-man, collector of bad debts, government employe, Baltimore and Ohio railroad special representative on Capitol Hill, and globe-trotting agent for a perfume company.

Big names popped up throughout his recital: Sir Thomas Lipton, British tea magnate and yachtsman; Kaiser Wilhelm, whose police dog disappeared after Maragon passed by; the late Hugh Johnson of NRA fame, who wept in Maragon's presence at a sandlot ball game; and, of course, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide, whom Maragon described as a "good friend."

The story had many of the ingredients of a Horatio Alger success yarn, with one glaring exception.

Maragon was asked about his financial standing. Was he rich, poor or in between?

"I don't even know where I'm going to get the money to pay this man here," he blurted out.

He was looking at Attorney Myron G. Ehrlich, who is representing him in the Senate 5-per-center investigation.

Ehrlich, sitting in his office in the Columbian Building with Maragon and reporters, asked his client:

Never "Used" Gen. Vaughan

"Have you ever accepted any money for doing anybody a favor in any Government department?

"I have not," Maragon replied.

Reporters pressed Maragon to elaborate on his relationship with General Vaughan. He insisted that it was nothing more than that of "good friend."

"To retain a good friend," he said, "three things are necessary. You must be honest, loyal and not use him."

He said he had observed all three in the case of General Vaughan.

He said that the White House pass he once possessed was not obtained for him by General Vaughan, but was a routine pass given to transportation men who might be summoned to the White House on business. He said he got his as a B&O representative, and eventually surrendered it to George Drescher, former chief of

Woods, Hunt Memo Tell How Truman Aide Helped

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A Senate investigating committee yesterday heard how some California racetrack promoters used influence extending into the White House to get scarce building materials in 1947 to build the Tanforan track near San Francisco.

Tighe E. Woods, Housing Expediter, and a memorandum from the files of James V. Hunt, self-styled "management counselor," both supplied testimony that President Truman's close friend and military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, had assisted the group.

Woods also testified that a Camden, N. J., lawyer, Samuel P. Orlando, had made a sworn statement to his office on October 24, 1947, that the ownership of the track had changed hands. The statement asserted, Woods said, that the original owners, who had been fined and jailed for using scarce materials on the track, had sold the track to a new group.

Suggests Perjury Probe

After the hearing Woods told the Senators he will refer the affidavit to the Justice Department at once, to see if perjury is involved.

The following developments marked the hearing:

1. Woods testified that Vaughan summoned him to the White House in 1948, and told him that Vaughan's friends were interested in the Tanforan track. The track owners were trying to get clearance from Woods' office for construction of the track. The use of scarce building materials at that time was sharply restricted by law.

Vaughan told him, Woods testified, that he wanted to "make sure there is no prejudice in your office just because this is a race track case." Vaughan then added, Woods said:

"Some friends of mine are interested. It is your duty to handle the case on its merits and on its legality."

Vaughan "Damned Sore"

2. Before Woods testified, Francis D. Flanagan, an attorney for the investigating committee, read from a memorandum allegedly from Hunt's personal files. They were listed in Hunt's records as "the Vaughan file." This memo quoted Vaughan as saying he was "damned sore" at Frank L. Creedon, housing expediter before Woods.

The Hunt memorandum, dated October 25, 1947 and apparently written by Hunt, said:

"General Vaughan, while talking to me about other subjects, remarked with vehemence that 'your friend Creedon is a fine guy,' meaning, by his tone, the opposite.

"He went on to tell me that he had sent three men to see Creedon, after arranging personally by phone. Creedon had turned them over to a group headed by 'a lawyer named Mayer' and that the group 'had given these people a fine brush-off.'"

Explains Tanforan Case

Hunt then wrote in his memo the following explanation of the Tanforan case, as Vaughan had told it to him:

"A group had recently purchased for three million dollars the Tanforan racetrack . . . This track had been in trouble due to violations of Veterans Housing Priorities in construction of the track. They had been ordered to conform to the law and when they continued to violate, the Housing Expediter

Alexandria Council Picks City Manager

The Alexandria City Council last night chose Guy W. Ancell now city manager of Portsmouth, Va., as new Alexandria city manager, by a 5-to-2 vote.

He will take over his new post September 15, at a salary of $15,000 a year.

His election ended a search for a new city manager which began in March, when the council discharged Nicholas Colasanto by a 4-to-3 vote. Robert S. Marshall, director of the Alexandria Housing and Redevelopment Authority, has acted temporarily in the position.

Eight New Polio Cases for Area; Four in District

Eight new cases of polio were reported in Greater Washington yesterday. Four District victims brought to 22 the number of cases here this year.

District victims were:

A two-year-old boy who lives in the 100 block of 19th st. ne., admitted to Gallinger Hospital on July 18; a five-year-old boy, 1st block of N st. sw., admitted to Children's Hospital, Aug. 7; a three-year-old girl, 4900 block Minnesota ave. ne., admitted to Walter Reed Hospital, Aug. 2, and a 19-year-old boy, 4900 block Minnesota ave. ne., Walter Reed, August 5. Authorities said the latter two lived in the same residence but are not related.

In nearby counties:

A 30-year-old woman from the 2800 block of S. Buchanan st., Arlington, was admitted to Gallinger August 1.

A four-year-old girl from the 900 block of Elbert ave., Alexandria, was admitted to Gallinger July 18, and has since been cured.

From Fairfax County a 14-year-old boy from North st., Falls Church, was admitted to Gallinger. A four-year-old boy from the 1200 block of Dale dr., Silver Spring, was admitted to Children's Hospital.

New Surgical Techniques Devised for Faulty Hearts

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter
(Fourth of Six Articles)

The 1937 edition of "Heart Disease" by Dr. Paul White, noted heart authority, contains the statement:

"There is no curative treatment, surgical or medical, for congenital heart defects."

Dr. White wrote the facts of that year. The doctors then could do nothing to remedy nature's slip-ups; they could offer nothing but sympathy to children born with malformed hearts.

Since then, however, literally thousands of such children have had their hearts in the hands of surgeons for repair. The majority were returned with hearts adjusted to normal or near-normal function; some died despite the surgeon's skill; the rest were given a better grip on life, their hearts replumbed.

Those who came through with a new lease on life owe that to dogs, daring surgeons and the infection fighters, sulfa drugs and penicillin, which cut the hazards of chest surgery.

This pioneering surgery on children with congenital heart defects, a small fraction of the human population, paved the way to today's new operations for heart valves crippled by rheumatic fever attacks. About 95 per cent of the heart defects in children follow rheumatic fever.

Dr. Robert E. Gross of Boston, the dean of heart surgery, eliminated Dr. White's statement from any revised editions with his 1939 report of success against patent ductus arteriosus (the failure of an embryonic blood vessel to close at birth). He had surgically disposed of a congenital heart defect.

Dr. Alfred Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig of Johns Hopkins Hospital brought new fame to the Baltimore institution and longer life expectancy to most "blue" babies, in 1944. They had worked out a surgical way to give them more normal color and vitality.

And in October of the same year, Dr. Clarence Crawford of Stockholm, Sweden, eliminated another congenital heart defect with the first operation on a human for coarctation of the aorta, unnatural narrowing of the body's main

Reshape Asia Policy Soon, Quirino Asks

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The United States must not "tarry too long" in reshaping its Asia policy lest that half of the world be "lost to communism by default," the Senate was told yesterday by the President of the Philippine Republic.

In a frank plea for his Pacific Union idea, President Elpidio Quirino declared Asia's "most urgent problem" is security. He pointed to "the threat to Korea, the infiltration into Viet Nam, the debacle in China."

Communism is bound to win in the Far East "unless something of the courage and vision that went into the forging of the democratic defenses in Europe is applied to the forging of a similar system of defense in Asia," he asserted.

Quirino spoke to both House and Senate but separately because there is no place on Capitol Hill big enough for a joint session. He talked later in the day with President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

The Philippine executive declared the free countries of Southeast Asia—apparently excluding China—and the Pacific must get together in a Pacific Union.

"No military commitments are contemplated at this moment," he said, because the countries have no

USAF Split Over Worth Of B-36 in '47

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Air Force chiefs were badly split over the worth of the giant B-36 bomber less than two years ago, a spokesman told Congress yesterday.

Opening its long-heralded probe of the six-engined Consolidated-Vultee warplane and current air power policies, the House Armed Services Committee heard Robert A. Lovett, wartime Assistant Secretary of War for Air, and Maj. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, USAF, trace the history of the controversial airplane.

Smith began reading a prepared Air Force "History of B-36 Procurement," which told of the opposition of Gen. George C. Kenney, then commanding general of the Strategic Air Command, to the bomber. Kenney, now president of the official Air University, "had no faith in the airplane," he declared.

But Smith, in recounting the ups and downs of the B-36, indicated that top USAF chiefs now are convinced that the half-billion-dollar investment in the bomber has "paid off." He will continue his "inside story" of the development of the plane today.

As the hearings began, Chief Counsel Joseph Keenan inserted in the record some additional charges of irregularities concerning the procurement of the Con-

Permanent Haven Voted by Senate

By The Associated Press

Dr. Ludovit Ruhmann of Bethesda, Md., a political refugee from Czechoslovakia, would be granted permanent residence in the United States under a bill passed by the Senate yesterday.

The measure now goes to the House.

Dr. Ruhmann came to the United States in May, 1948, after escaping from Czechoslovakia at a time his arrest had been ordered by the government on the charge that he was the agent of a foreign power.

He said that he had been a member of the underground during the war, and became secretary-general of the anti-Communist Democratic Party in his country in 1946.

Hebrew Old Testament Texts Found in Cave Near Jericho

London, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—G. L. Harding, chief curator of antiquities for Hashemite Jordan, said today that Hebrew texts of the Old Testament have been found in a cave near Jericho. He called them the "most important" archeological find ever made in Palestine.

Harding wrote in the London Times that the discovery was made in 1947 but "unfortunate secrecy" prevented full disclosure of its importance until now. He said the texts probably were written in 200 B. C.

Harding said a goat herder two years ago came upon "a small circular opening in a rock face" in the neighborhood of Ain Feshka, south of Jericho. Inside, he said, were glass jars holding eight rolls of Hebrew text. One was the complete Book of Isaiah, he said, a scroll 22 feet long. Fragments or partial scrolls of Old Testament books included Genesis, Deuteronomy, Leviticus, Judges, Daniel and Enoch.

Harding said four scrolls were sent to the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and four to the Monastery of St. Mark in Jerusalem, "from where in the course of time, they found their way to America. There they are being photographed and published by the American School of Oriental Research."

Harding said the discovery would help to correct errors that crept into the Old Testament texts during centuries of copying and transcribing.

"Greek translations of about the Fifth Century A.D. were the earliest known Old Testament manuscripts and have, on account of their earlier date, been considered more authentic than the Hebrew texts," he said.

News 'Control' Denied

Future Pentagon Interviews Require Press Chief's Okay

By The Associated Press

Hereafter all requests for interviews with Army, Navy or Air Force officials in Washington must have the approval of the National Military Establishment's press chief.

This applies to requests for interviews made to the press section. It applies only to the Pentagon, headquarters of the NME.

Recently, as part of the armed forces unification, the press sections of the Army, Navy and Air Force were brought, together in one big room. Until then, a reporter could ask the press section of one or the other service for an interview with a certain officer and it could be arranged independently.

Now, before the interviews can be set up, the request must have the approval of the overall NME press chief. This, in effect, takes away the authority of the individual service press sections to arrange interviews with their own personnel.

NME press officials deny this is an attempt to "control" news. Their view is that it enables them to know what is going on.

There is nothing to prevent a reporter from attempting to arrange an interview on his own. Sometimes he succeeds.

NME press officials point out that they have devised a form for their own office records. It is entitled "request for interview" and says "all interviews must be approved in advance by the chief of the press branch."

NME press officials said they do ask officials granting reporters interviews or their own that they inform the press section and also tell what subjects were discussed. This, NME officials say, enables them to be in a position to answer queries from other reporters who check on the story.

European Strategy Pleases U. S. Chiefs

By the United Press

The U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff found the military leaders of Great Britain and eight western European nations unanimously in favor of a regional military setup under the Atlantic Pact, an informant said last night.

The plan was one of four taken to Europe by the U. S. Joint Chiefs —Gen. Omar Bradley, Army; Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Navy, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force.

They returned yesterday in President Truman's plane, Independence, after 10 days of conferences in Europe and England with the chiefs of staff of nine Atlantic Pact nations.

The United States military chiefs were pleasantly surprised to find that British Field Marshall Viscount Montgomery and Gen. Jean Delattre de Tassigny of France apparently are in agreement on the basic strategy for the defense of Western Europe, it was said.

This strategy is reported based on holding as much of Western Europe as possible in the face of an enemy attack, and projecting the defense line farther east as the Western European nations build up strength.

Montgomery's strategy definitely is not built on evacuation, as had been reported previously, it was declared. Montgomery and Lelattre de Tassigny were declared in some quarters to be in sharp disagreement over strategy, with the French general wanting to try to hold a line along the Rhine and the British marshal believing such a defense impossible.

arms aid to foreign nations will be required for "four or five years."

Vandenberg told reporters later that his suggestion does not mean he is committed to the proposed figure of $1,450,000,000 for the over-all arms program, or the eventual expenditure of $1,160,990,000 of it (as requested, for western Europe.

His suggestion would not alter the $211,370,000 proposed for military aid to Greece and Turkey, nor the $27,640,000 for Iran, Korea and the Phillippines.

But it might cut the 1950 cash for western Europe to something near 500 million dollars and some of this might be available from a 400 million dollars set aside for foreign aid which is in the present budget, he said.

He has an "open mind" on the eventual spending, said Vandenberg, and will listen with interest to the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff who today will report to the joint committee the results of their defense discussions with western European military leaders.

Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), who has joined with Vandenberg in the calls for halving the Administration's arms plan, said he was in agreement with Vandenberg's current proposal.

Dulles Cites Reasons

Under that suggestion, Dulles pointed out, "You can cancel out those contracts (which would be authorized) or you can switch them into the national defense program" if you "decide for any reason not to send the arms to Europe."

Other Congressmen pointed out, however, that in one respect the Vandenberg proposal is "stronger" than the Administration plan.

Money authorizations, they noted, are frequently pared in appropriations action, but it is almost impossible to change a contract authorization once a contract has been let.

This would mean less control by Congress over that portion of the program, it was said.

Privately, several Republicans and Democrats criticized the Vandenberg "compromise" as a "face-saving gesture."

'Putting Off the Pain'

"It's just putting off the 'pain' for a later accounting," said one GOP congressman. "That's what we criticize the Democrats for."

On the other side of Congress, where the House Foreign Affairs Committee was meeting in executive session, a different "compromise" which he said has "bipartisan support," was submitted by Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio).

Vorys offered, as an amendment to the arms program, a complex "six-month" arms plan extending to March 31, 1950, when "we can review the plans and promises for common defense."

His proposal is for a program of about 730 million dollars—but only some 430 million dollars would be cash outlay.

Use of Surplus Figured

While the Administration bill would write off at no cost—except for rehabilitation—surplus weapons which originally cost 450 million dollars, Vory's plan would place a 300-million-dollar value on the amount of surplus he estimates could be delivered in six months.

He would then provide 300 million dollars plus for new weapons, technical assistance, etc., for Western Europe, and about 100 million dollars for Greece and Turkey.

Vory's proposal would give Iran, Korea and the Philippines, to spend in a six-month period, the full $27,640,000 worth of aid asked in the Administration's plan.

Another Amendment

Representative James G. Fulton (R., Pa.), another member of the House committee, meanwhile, disclosed he plans an amendment by which arms aid to any country could be ended by joint resolution of Congress, instead of letting the President decide this.

Fulton, like Vorys and many other Congressmen, also insists that the value of any surplus weapons included in the arms program should be stated in the legislation.

Senator Hary F. Byrd (D., Va.) told Secretary Johnson yesterday that the arms plan as drafted would permit "unlimited authority" to transfer surplus weapons.

Johnson said that was not the intention, an' said he would agree to writing in a limitation.

In urging approval of the full arms program, Johnson said:

"To those who suggest authorizing only token assistance pending development by the North Atlantic Pact organization of its unified strategic plans, I answer that no more than token deliveries can be made for the next six to nine months."

Present plans for defending western Europe, he declared, are not mere "paper plans," but "we have real and concrete military integration already working in western Europe" through the Western Union—Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N.H.), who favors including new aid for Nationalist China in the arms bill, called on Johnson for his help in bringing back to this country Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger, for testimony on the military situation in the Far East.

Johnson said this is a matter for President Truman to determine. Johnson suggested the committee first listen to the Joint Chiefs of Staffs, and then advise him if they still desire MacArthur for additional military testimony.

Secretary Johnson is expected to return for additional testimony today before the Joint Chiefs appear. After testifying before the Senate committee, the Joint Chiefs will meet with the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Nazi Revival Not Starting, McCloy Says

By The Associated Press

Nazism is not being revived in Germany, United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy said last night, although Hitler's former followers hold 30 per cent of the top government and industry jobs.

"There is enough sense of freedom and decency in the German people," he said, "on which can be built a healthy, peaceful state."

McCloy spoke over the Columbia Broadcasting Network in his first public address since he took over as high commissioner and military governor in western Germany. He is on a brief trip home in connection with his new duties.

He said it is necessary to use former Nazi Party members in the new Germany because there were few anti-Nazis at the peak of Hitler's power.

McCloy, who succeeded Gen. Lucius D. Clay, said rising German prosperity has led to some growth in the nationalism and assertiveness of the people.

"The great majority of them feel imposed upon when they are blamed for what they consider to be the faults of others whose policies they are now prepared to disclaim," he said.

Among German liberals, labor and the middle class, McCloy said, he found "a strong core of freedom-seeking people."

German recovery need not carry with it the fear of fresh German aggression, McCloy said, because controls on German warmaking facilities are here to stay for a long time.

armed forces "to muster under the terms of a military alliance."

"If, after the union has been organized," the United States and others "should desire to offer such help as should lie in their power to give, it need hardly be said that the offer will not only be warmly received, but justly blessed," he said.

Quirino for some time has been advancing the idea of a Pacific pact or union. His speech yesterday recognized State Department coolness to any firm American commitments at this time, although the department is "sympathetic" to any group of nations getting together to contain and control the threat of communism.

Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), ranking minority member, both had a "no comment" on the Pacific Union idea. One ranking Senator said the idea was "a bit premature" while this country is still arguing about military aid to Europe under the Atlantic Pact.

However, President Truman last night assured President Quirino that he will not return "empty handed" from his visit to this country.

Mr. Truman made the remark in an exchange of toasts at a formal dinner given for him by the Philippine Chief Executive.

economic conference starting the first week in September.

One of the main topics to be developed at the conference is the channeling of American capital investment towards under developed territories in Africa, Southeast Asia and South America.

Both Cripps and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin will represent the British in Washington, but Bevin is believed to lean more toward middle-of-the-road economics and to be less insistent on following the Cripps economic policy.

Chief worry here is that neither Cripps nor Bevin will be able to give any assurances on the major issues which appear to irk Americans most—nationalization of industries and expanding social services.

Nationalization is the core of the Labor Government's policy. And even the Conservative opposition is firmly committed to the social service program.

Roosevelt, Marcantonio Tangle As House Advances Aid Bill

By the United Press

The House sent the multibillion dollar foreign aid bill to a conference committee yesterday after sharp floor debate in which Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D., N. Y.) assailed Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) for calling it an "imperialistic" move.

In his second floor speech since his election, the youthful Roosevelt blasted Russia as the real source of imperialism and praised the Marshall European recovery plan as "the most humane help ever offered to sister countries."

Meanwhile, foreign aid chief Paul G. Hoffman, preparing to leave today for a 16-day European tour, said the recovery program will be set back seriously unless Marshall Plan nations make "real progress" this year in stepping up foreign trade and earning more dollars.

The House action means that a joint Senate-House committee will go to work immediately to draft a compromise on the 500-million-dollar difference between the foreign aid bills passed by the respective chambers.

The Senate completed action Monday on a $5,647,724,000 bill to finance European recovery and Army-occupied areas until June 30, 1950. The House had acted weeks ago on a bill that provided less actual cash, but authorized spending it all by May 15, 1950. Hence the Senate bill represents a cut of about $479,871,420.

The House also voted, 210 to 164, to instruct its conferees to fight against a provision in the Senate bill which would give $344,000 to a congressional "watchdog" committee, set up by the Republican Eightieth Congress to supervise foreign aid spending.

Administration spokesmen contended the watchdog committee has "served no useful purpose," but Republicans, led by Representative John Taber (N. Y.), argued that the group is needed to keep an eye on "these huge sums."

He said the aid program was "dictated by monopolistic interests" and would have "devastating effects" on the economies of all nations.

Roosevelt leaped to his feet and replied that he was "appalled that any patriotic American could get up here and tell us that we're being imperialistic by helping Europe."

There is imperialism in the world today, he went on, but it comes from Russia and not from the United States.

"Let us realize," he said, "in contradiction to the words of Mr. Marcantonio, that the purpose of this legislation is to help fight against communism and is the most human help ever offered to sister countries."

Hoffman revealed at a news conference that he will visit Ireland, Britain, France, Italy, Greece, Germany and Belgium for conferences with their governments and with United States aid missions.

'Curse' Dug Up In Home of Slain Medium

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—Police combing the magic-cluttered apartment of a murdered medium came up with a "voodoo" curse today.

They reported discovery of a prescription bottle with the paper doll figure of a man suspended, head down, inside.

The name "Mike Pappas" was scribbled on the doll three times. Police explained voodoo practitioners use such devices to bring death or illness to enemies.

A Baltimore restaurateur, Mike Pappas, was one of the persons questioned in connection with the slaying of the spiritualist, 60-year-old Mrs. Emma A. Kefalos.

Described as Acquaintance

He was described as an acquaintance both of Mrs. Kefalos and her second husband, who has been dead four years.

Fellow mediums of Mrs. Kefalos tried to put a supernatural finger on her slayer at a seance, but no important clew came through from the spirit world.

Police meantime rounded up Baltimore mediums and spiritualists, crystal ball gazers and fortune tellers. They also asked Mrs. Kefalos' clients to come in.

Her body, bound hand and foot, was found yesterday in the raspberry-tinted, second-floor apartment where she presided at seances and gave spiritual readings. She had been strangled with an ironing cord.

Mrs. Ora Dunn, 45, told detectives that Mrs. Kefalos—her best friend—had premonitions.

"She was scared to death," reported Mrs. Dunn. "She was even afraid to go to sleep. She knew she was going to die the way she did."

$1400 Savings Stamps

In Mrs. Kefalos' flat, police found $115 in cash, $1400 worth of savings stamps and four diamond rings. They still were hunting for some $600 Mrs. Dunn told them the victim kept because she "didn't like banks."

The woman live dalone with a plump tabby cat. A fellow medium said she was a "wonderful lady but a mediocre spiritualist who had a lot of trouble with men friends."

A first husband of Mrs. Kefalos, tentatively identified by police as Clyde Baker, is being sought for questioning. Friends of the victim said he lived in Washington, D. C.

Besides Mrs. Dunn and her daughter, Vaughn, a Washington, D. C., Government worker, those questioned in the case included Nick Dritsas, operator of a lunchroom below Mrs. Kefalos' apartment. Dritsas found her body.

Jimmy Stewart Takes Bride As 300 Women Sigh in Street

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
Jimmy Stewart and Gloria McLean

Hollywood, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Jimmy Stewart, Hollywood's No. 1 bashful bachelor, married Gloria McLean today while a crowd of 300 disappointed women sighed outside the church.

Stewart, who held out until he was 41, slipped a plain gold band on the pretty divorcee's finger before only 25 guests, including Movie Stars Spencer Tracy, Gary Cooper and Ann Sothern.

The newlyweds won't get their honeymoon trip for another month. Friday they will fly to Akron, Ohio, where the star will be parade marshal at the soap-box derby. The couple also will attend the Disabled American Veterans' convention in Cleveland. A Honolulu honeymoon will begin on September 7.

Stewart met his 31-year-old brunette bride at a dinner party in Gary Cooper's home last year.

Mrs. McLean's secret, she said, was not wanting to be rushed. She was just divorcing wealthy sportsman Edward McLean, son of the late Evalyn Walsh McClean. Stewart's wedding makes him a stepfather. She has two sons, Ronald, 5, and Michael, 3.

Dental Act Defendant Loses $500

John H. Stachura, 42, of 112 Sherman ave., Takoma Park, Md., forfeited $500 yesterday when he failed to appear in Municipal Court to answer a charge of practicing dentistry without a license.

The collateral was ordered forfeited by Judge Frank H. Myers. According to Clark F. King, assistant corporation counsel, Stachura could have been fined up to $1000 for the offense.

Stachura, a dental technician, was arrested at his office, 1214 New York ave. nw., by Police Lieut. H. H. Carper. The officer said that he took a set of false teeth to Stachura to be fitted and Stachura undertook to do the job.

Police stated that they had received complaints that Stachura was practicing in violation of the District Dental Act, and began an investigation.

Sheppeck Takes Nichol's Post At Walter Reed

Lieut. Col. Michael L. Sheppeck became executive officer of Walter Reed General Hospital yesterday, succeeding Col. William W. Nichol, who was transferred to Army-Navy General Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark.

Col. Sheppeck

A native of Nanticoke, Pa., Colonel Sheppeck is a graduate of St. Louis and Detroit Universities. For the past two years he studied hospital administration at Northwestern University, taking a master of science degree.

Before that, he commanded the Twenty-eighth General Hospital in Japan for three years. He served at Walter Reed previously as assistant chief, neuropsychiatric service, in 1941.

French Hopes High for Success of New Youth-Giving Serum

Paris, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—A new "youth serum" developed by the laboratory chief of the Pasteur Institute may be put on public sale within a few months if tests continue successful, it was disclosed today.

A spokesman for the institute said the new serum has shown apparently remarkable curative and life-preserving powers and that experiments are being undertaken after 18 months of successful tests on animals.

Dr. Michel Bardach, laboratory chief of the world-famed institute, developed the serum.

The weekly magazine Paris Match, which first reported the serum, asserted that it so rejuvenated a photographer, worn out from overwork, that he regained his full energy and grew a new full crop of hair. An aged retired actress, it said, regained the use of her limbs after suffering for years from rheumatism.

A Pasteur Institute spokesman said if all tests were successful the serum might be put on sale in drug stores by January 1.

Tests have been conducted for months on horses, roosters, bulls and dogs. An aged racehorse, rejuvenated, was able to race again, the institute spokesman said.

Prof. Georges Brouardel, vice president of the French Academy of Medicine, said today he might begin experiments with the serum soon.

Paris Match said Bardach's serum first was developed almost simultaneously with the youth serum of Russian scientist Alexandre Bogomolets. Bogomolets caused a sensation in 1946 when he announced this serum might keep alive until 150 years old. Unfortunateely, he died about one month later. He was 64.

Police Get Collegian With Too Many Books

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 9 (U.P.).—William C. Adams, 28, graduate astronomy student, was behind bars today, charged with finding a novel means of working his way.

The manager of the campus textbook exchange said he was amazed by the piles of books Adams kept offering for sale, until he saw Adams pluck a book from the exchange bookshelves, and add it to his hoard.

$43,543 Embezzlement Charged to Bank Teller

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—A trusted teller was arrested today on charges of embezzling $43,543 from his bank and blowing it on horse race bets.

John Hagenauer, 38, an employe of the Oak Park Trust & Savings Bank for 20 years, pleaded guilty to charges of violating the Federal Reserve Act. Bond was set at $5000.

U. S. Husband Total Reaches All-Time High

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—The American husband is a pretty good guy. Statistics prove it.

There are a lot of them, about 35,500,000. This is the highest number in the Nation's history, says the statistical bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The typical husband maintains a household, but due to the housing shortage, about 2,500,000 couples are living with relatives, or in other temporary quarters.

In 1948 all but three percent of married men were living with their wives. This includes men with jobs away from home, or temporarily absent for other reasons than marital troubles.

The husbands are relatively young. Nearly one-third are under 35. About one-fourth are over 55, and 90 per cent of these men have been married 15 years or more.

Only 6 per cent of husbands under 35 have been married before. For all ages, 13 per cent have been married more than once, including those widowed as well as divorced.

Many second marriages are successful, with more than 20 per cent of remarried husbands remaining hitched at least 20 years.

Family responsibilities are greatest at 35 to 54 years of age. Then 20 per cent of husbands have three or more dependent children, 20 per cent have two, and nearly 25 per cent have one young child to care for.

Ninety-eight per cent of men from 35 to 54 years old are holding down jobs. Among those 55 and over, 75 per cent still are working.

Less than one-fourth of the wives work outside the home, even though the proportion of working wives is greater than ever before.

SPEAKING OF Furniture

By ELIZABETH GUYER

BLEND THOSE STYLES

As furniture dealers we are often asked how to mix styles and periods. They can be mixed, of course, but it takes an understanding of different designs to blend them and obtain a harmonious room.

Hepplewhite and Sheraton, for example, go well with certain Chippendale pieces as well as with Louis XVI and with some Duncan Phyfe. English Regency blends with Sheraton, Hepplewhite, Chinese, Chippendale and Duncan Phyfe.

Mixing styles and periods gives you greater freedom and variety, also a greater chance to express your personality and create the kind of home you desire.

Just remember that styles which are similar in scale, line and texture go well together. The woods need not be identical to mix well. Light woods and dark often achieve very pleasing contrasts.

Illustrated above is a dining room furnished with a Duncan Phyfe table, Chippendale chairs and a Sheraton buffet . . . note how well they blend into a beautiful combination.

We would enjoy discussing your furniture problem with you. Drop in to . . .

the White House Secret Service detail.

He said that, contrary to reports, he never had special parking privileges either in or outside the White House grounds. He said that when he drove there he had to "take his chances" on getting space along West Executive Avenue.

Denies Pearson Story

He denied a story by Drew Pearson that he was at Potsdam for the Big Three conference, and that he came back with a pocketful of diamonds.

"I have never been to Potsdam," he said.

He told how, as a youngster in Kansas City, he worked as a bellhop in the Jefferson Hotel, headquarters of the Pendergast organization.

But he emphasized that he never knew President Truman or General Vaughan in Kansas City. He said he met them on Capitol Hill, when Mr. Truman was a United States Senator from Missouri and Vaughan was his secretary. At that time, Maragon was drumming up business for the B. & O.

Won't Divulge Senator's Name

Maragon's story of his sacrificial act for a liquor-toting Senator went back to August, 1920, on the very first day that he ever put foot in Washington.

He steadfastly refused to identify the Senator except to say that he was from the Midwest. When a reporter asked him if it was the late "Jim" Reed of Missouri, who had the liquor and later got him the G-man appointment, Maragon shook his head and said:

"It was very hard to get to Jim."

His story about this particular incident required some background. He recalled the days when he was a railroad news butcher, selling papers, magazines, fruit and the like. In this role, he said, he had met a lot of politicians, who then used trains more than they do now for campaigning.

Well, in August, 1920, he had some money accumulated and decided to come East—specifically, to Washington.

On his way here, his train made a 20-minute stop and he got off for lunch. A man nearby yelled, "Hi, Butch"—the name Maragon had acquired as a news butcher. He recognized a politician he had met in his earlier travels.

When the train got under way again, the politician was aboard. He handed Maragon his card, and Maragon found out then for the first time that he was a United States Senator, bound for Washington to represent his constituents. The two of them talked a lot on the way here, and the Senator told Maragon to call on him—that he would be "delighted" to see him.

The train arrived at Union Station.

"A porter named George Washington," Maragon said, "piled up all the bags and took two in his hands and two under his arms.

"He got to the gate, and one of the bags was leaking.

"A policeman was standing there. He told the porter to leave the bags down. The Senator was five or six feet behind.

"The Senator looked at me and I looked at him.

"The policeman said: 'Whose bag is that?'

"I said, 'Mine.'"

Attorney Ehrlich interrupted Maragon to ask if it really was his.

Fined $25 for Senator's Gin

"No, it was his," Maragon said.

He went on to tell how the policemen opened up the bag and found two bottles of gin, one of them busted," and two pints of Old Sunnybrook.

The policeman, according to Maragon, said: "Don't you know this is prohibition?" Maragon said he didn't think the carrying of four bottles was such a great offense.

Anyway, he said, the policeman took him to the old First Precinct Station, booked him, and required him to put up a bond. Two days later, he said, he went to court and was fined either $25 or $50.

Maragon said he told the Senator what happened and that the Senator reimbursed him for the fine, and then started talking about a job. The first job he lined up didn't turn out well, and Maragon became a news butcher on the Chesapeake and Ohio, on the run from here to White Sulphur Springs.

Appointed to FBI

Later, according to Maragon, the Senator made good in a big way. He said the lawmaker sent him to see Rush Holland, then Assistant Attorney General, who arranged for him to file his application for the Bureau of Investigation.

His appointment came through on April 6, 1923, and he was so informed by W. J. Burns, then Chief of the Bureau. J. Edgar Hoover, Maragon recalled, was then first assistant to Burns and was in charge of white-slave violations.

It was in 1923, before his appointment, that Maragon became a citizen of the United States.

He said that, after attending a G-man school in New York, he was assigned to the Hoboken docks, where an IWW strike was in progress. Later, he said, he served in New Orleans for two or three months.

"Guarded" Olympic Team

He resigned then, he said, to take a job as investigator for the United States Shipping Board.

He gave up this job (he thought it was in 1924) and got another as guardian of the American team that went to the Olympic Games in Paris. It was up to him, he said, to see that the American boys and girls were not drugged or otherwise harmed in advance of the contests.

"After the games," Maragon said, smiling, "I went to Doorn, Holland, hoping to pick up a glimpse of Kaiser Wilhelm. As far as I got was the wire fence all around.

"One evening I was talking to an innkeeper. I told him I wanted to take one of the Kaiser's famous police dogs back to America. He called two sentries, and asked them to smuggle one out. I paid $60 for the dog."

Gave Kaiser's Dog to Senator

The animal was named Carla von Glavennap. Maragon, on his return, gave it to Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota.

"Was he the Senator who had the liquor?" Maragon was asked.

Maragon laughed and shook his head.

It was on his way back from Europe that year that he met Sir Thomas Lipton, who was on his way to this country to lose another yacht race with his Shamrock.

"I spent five and a half of my happiest days with that man," Maragon said, displaying a photograph of himself and Sir Thomas on shipboard.

Was Collector, Investigator

His next job was as a collector of bad debts with the old District National Bank. Then came another assignment as an investigator, this time for the Labor Department. He got the job, he said, through a friend, William N. Doak, who for a time was Secretary of Labor. His job was to hunt down aliens who had come in illegally.

After that came a job as investigator with the National Recovery Administration, under Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

Maragon said he worked for a time with the Bituminous Coal Commission, and then, in 1940, was hired by Daniel L. Moorman, general passenger agent of the B & O Railroad. The B & O, he said, was then taking a beating from the Pennsylvania line on Capitol Hill busfness, and it was his task to reverse that situation.

Gave Up $2700 B & O Job

He was not modest about what followed. He said that, in five and a half years, the B & O got 87 per cent of such business as transporting the bodies of deceased members of Congress and the funeral parties that went along.

Denying that he was fired by the B & O, he said he gave up that $2700-a-year job to accept one paying four times as much. He got the offer, he said, in the summer of 1945 while he was in San Francisco with a special presidential train. That had been sent out there in case the weather turned bad and President Truman, who was attending the United Nations meeting, was unable to use his plane, the Sacred Cow.

Worked for Perfume Firm

The new job, Maragon said, was proffered by David A. Bennett, president of the Albert Verley Co., a Chicago perfume concern. Bennett, he said, wanted him to help the company reestablish its overseas connections—a task, he said, that involved buying oils and essences all over the world.

By the following year, 1946, Maragon had another job—this time as an interpreter for an American mission that went to Greece to supervise an election.

Maragon's version of what happened on that occasion differed sharply from the story old by others. To begin with, he said that he got the job without any help from General Vaughn—got it on his merits. He said he was sent back from Athens by Henry F. Grady, chief of the mission, after he had reported on some things he didn't like.

Saw Americans With Reds

He said he saw several members of the mission in "drinking brawls" and using profane language. He said he also saw them talking to Greek Communists.

He said he related this, and other incidents, to Grady, who 10 days later sent him back to Washington. Grady since has been quoted as saying that Maragon had become a "nuisance."

Asked about his much-talked-about bank account in San Antonio, Tex., Maragon said this was established in 1943 when he helped two Washington friends, fruit merchants, to buy bananas down there. He said it was necessary to open a bank account there to pay for banana purchases and it was opened in his name.

Bystander in Race Track Deal

Not having had a bank account theretofore, he said, he decided to continue the one in San Antonio—and did continue it for three years, when he opened one in the Liberty National Bank here.

What about his part in the negotiations over the Tanforan race track on the West Coast?

Maragon said that he had no part, that he was a sort of bystander in the whole business. He said that about a year and a half ago a man named Eugene Mori called him up, saying he was a friend of a restaurant owner that Maragon had met in San Francisco. He said that, at Mori's invitation, he met him at the Statler Hotel.

Mori told him, he said, that he and some others had an appointment in the Housing Expediter's Office.

Walking on Political Who's Who

Maragon said that he offered to drive them there. He said he "sat in a corner" while the conference over the race track took place, took them back to the Statler afterward, had a few drinks, and then left.

"That's the truth," he said. "I never saw them again.

Maragon said he was now working on a political who's who, two books listing Republican and Democratic politicians.

Vaughan Aided Tanforan Track, Senate Probers Told

had ordered them to stop construction.

"Upon continued violation of the stop order, the Federal attorney had filed an injunction against the track and then work stopped. The court later assessed heavy fines and sent two or three people to prison."

(The records show that on July 10, 1947, the San Francisco Federal Court fined the Tanforan Co., Ltd., $90,000. Four men also were fined and given jail sentences. Guy M. Sandifer, president of Tanforan; Earl W. Heple, San Jose, Calif., building contractor, and William J. Levin, company secretary, each were fined $7500 and sentenced to three months in jail. A. W. Barnewitz, construction foreman, was fined $1000 and given a one-month sentence.)

"The new owners to whom General Vaughan referred, wanted now to complete some unfinished buildings and do some repair work. He said these people had no part in the previous trouble and asked the Housing Expediter for permission to spend $75,000 to protect their buildings.

"He said that these three men had a conference with four people in the Office of the Housing Expediter and that Creedon's people were not helpful. In fact, he was told that they were sarcastic and officious. He quoted one OHE man who asked them: 'What do you want us to do, lead you around by the hand?' as an example of the OHE attitude.

"General Vaughan said that there was no excuse for Government people treating citizens in this manner and he was damned sore at Creedon for permitting it. This being Saturday he said he was leaving the city to return next Wednesday and that upon his return he intended to tell Creedon how he felt about it.

"I told him," Hunt's memo continues, "that Creedon and his people had a reputation for most fair treatment and that I believed that there must be some misunderstanding somewhere. He said that I could tell Creedon how he felt.

"Anxious to prevent any misunderstanding that could develop into bad feeling between the White House and a good agency, I said I would talk to Creedon and Maher to see if I could straighten it out. Vaughan said that would be a good idea so I could tell him the story upon his return next Wednesday.

"He mentioned that one man among the group who bought Tanforan was a 'Bill Hellis'."

The affidavit of Attorney Orlando that created a stir late in the hearing, certified a change in the Tanforan ownership as taking place October 7, 1947. Orlando signed it as "secretary-treasurer of Tanforan Co., Ltd."

Woods testified that it listed as directors: Eugene Mori of Camden, N. J. (also named as president); Walter H. Donovan of Haddonfield, N. J., and Edward H. Ellis of Merchantville, N. J. (both also listed as vice presidents) and William G. Helis of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Flanagan, one of the committee's lawyers, testified that he had recently talked with both Mori and William G. Helis, jr.

Flanagan testified the younger Helis told him he had been handling his father's affairs for several years. He said Helis, jr., had told him there were some negotiations about the Tanforan track in the summer and fall of 1947 but that "they never went beyond the "negotiating stage." Flanagan got the same information from Mori last week, he said. Woods suggested that both Mori and Helis be brought before the committee as witnesses.

The name of John Maragon, a long-time friend of both Vaughan and President Truman, was brought into the hearing. Housing officials said that another group that had sought clearance for the Tanforan track included Maragon.

Woods testified that Hunt had claimed credit for getting Woods' appointment as Housing Expediter to succeed Creedon. He said that Hunt, 'an old friend of his family in Chicago," was called "Kingmaker" at social gatherings because of his boasts that he could get people appointed to high jobs.

Four days after Woods' White House session with Vaughan, the permit for the Tanforan track was granted. Woods told the committee it had previously been approved by Creedon.

vair bomber. They were in the form of an anonymous document received by a member of Congress, Representative Deane (D., N.C.) and turned over to the committee.

Most of the allegations in the nine-page epistle paralleled the "ugly rumors" put before the House last spring by Representative Van Zandt (R., Pa.). The latter's speech, telling of reports he had received of irregularities involved in the B-36 procurement program, brought about the current investigation.

Van Zandt's charges linked Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington with Floyd Odlum, millionaire head of the Atlas Corp. and chief owner of Consolidated-Vultee. The Pennsylvanian suggested that the Air Force had planned to cancel its orders for B-36s until Odlum made heavy contributions through Johnson to the Democratic warchest last fall.

Yesterday's anonymous communication purported to tell of the "efforts of the Atlas Corp. to take over the National Military Establishment."

It declared that Convair was in financial straits in 1947 when Odlum and Atlas bought control. As late as January, 1948, said the document, Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad informed Secretary of Defense Forrestal that the Air Force had found the B-36 "unsatisfactory" and was going to cut back its contract for 100 of the bombers.

Order Reported Prepared

An order canceling the contract was prepared, the unsigned communication said, but Consolidated Vultee's representatives were able to prevent its issuance.

Later, the statement indicated, Odlum and his associates contributed $6,500,000 to President Truman's 1948 campaign at the instance of Johnson and Symington. About the same time, aircraft circles heard of a plan to merge some of the "weaker" companies under Convair—with Symington taking over the presidency under Odlum. Symington has denied this, along with other of Van Zandt's charges.

The communication given the committee yesterday also made charges affecting Secretary Johnson that the aeronautics committee of the Research and Development Board had questioned the "technical feasibility" of an Air Force plan to boost the speed of the B-36 by installing jet booster engines. However, Dr. Robert F. Rinehart, executive secretary of the board, recommended the project without referring to this dissent, it was said.

Then, declared the anonymous statement, Dr. George P. Baker, chairman of the aeronautics committee, protested to Dr. Karl T. Compton, chairman of the board, who "reportedly went to Secretary Forrestal." Johnson, however, took over as Secretary of Defense and recommended that President Truman allocate the $147,858,000 for modification of the planes.

The air power investigation opened with Lovett on the stand. He outlined the world situation in 1940-41 when the B-36 program had its start. It was the "dreary cycle of defeats" by democratic nations then that caused War Department chiefs to plan for a bomber capable of striking at an enemy from bases in continental United States, he said.

"Design Studies" Asked

Lovett said that aircraft companies were asked to submit "design studies" for a plane capable of traveling 10,000 miles and carrying 10,000 pounds of bombs. An "impartial" board of technicians recommended the Consolidated plan, he declared, and the company was told to go ahead with two experimental versions four months before Pearl Harbor.

The former Army official said there was no "influence" whatsoever concerned with the award of the contract. Under questioning, he said he'd never heard of Odlum at that time, and that he did not own any aircraft stock.

In 1943, when Allied leaders became concerned with China's dropping out of the war, it was decided to place a production order for 100 of the big bombers without waiting to test the experimental models, said Lovett. We had no bases close enough to hit Japan with planes then in service or coming along, and the order was "worth the gamble," he said.

The next year, with the capture of the Marianas and the success of the B-29, development of the B-36 was slowed down, he declared. After the war, it was decided to continue the order despite the general cutback of war orders.

In 1948, while he was Undersecretary of State, said Lovett, possession of the B-36 proved a life-saver during the Berlin crisis.

"Russia is hard to get at and the only weapon we had to deter aggression was the atomic bomb and a method to deliver it in some quantity," he added.

Panic Rules Valley Stricken by Quake

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 9 (AP).—Fear and panic gripped survivors as damage continued to mount in the earthquake-stricken Patate Valley today.

Quito Observatory reported a new shock last night and said it probably was "rather strong" in the ravaged area south of this capital.

Marauding Indians of the Salasaca Tribe attacked relief columns working toward the stricken area yesterday, government officials said, but were beaten off.

Those who managed to escape the severe tremors Friday night that virtually destroyed Ambato, Pelileo and other towns and badly damaged 50 villages are alarmed by the appearance of new sulphurous springs and crevices, the continuing collapse of hillsides and strange underground rumblings accompanied by surface movements.

The destruction of still another town, Quero, 15 miles from Ambato in Tungurahua Province, and the nearby village of Paillitas, was reported today by survivors escaping from the area.

Town Swallowed

Eyewitnesses said a 1000-foot high hill was split in two by the shock at Quero, and Paillitas was swallowed up. Entire houses and fields, with farmhands and agricultural implements, disappeared in the upheaval.

Survivors said groups of workers attempting to restore the highway to Pelileo were buried in a huge landslide.

Estimates of the devastation mounted as it became clear that farms, too, had suffered heavy damage. Hundreds of farms, large and small, have been damaged or ruined by crevices and floods. One large farm, the Hacienda Guadalupe between Patate and Banos, was ruined by landslides and an inundation from the Patate River.

Patate is surrounded by a quake-made lake. Landslides caused it by blocking the Patate River.

The road between Banos and Pelileo in the center of the quake area was wiped out by landslides for 15 miles, leaving an emergency airlift as the only means of supply.

Ordered to Fire on Looters

Eyewitnesses said they did not believe the death toll ever would be known definitely. Estimates have ranged up to 6000 though the most reliable have stopped at 4000.

Troops and police in the valley were ordered to fire on looters without questions. The cabinet ordered a cavalry detachment to Pelileo to control the Salasacas Indians who threatened to pillage ruined areas.

A member of a medical brigade, reaching Guayaquil after three days in Pelileo where he treated injured, said the cries of trapped men, women and children could still be heard in the ruins. Relatives were helpless to give aid except to pass food and water to some through crevices.

He described Pelileo, a town of 3500, as without a single whole house.

The government has appealed for tents to house 100,000 homeless. Planes brought blood plasma, medicines and other supplies from Colombia, the United States, Peru, Chile and other countries.

$213.5 Billion U. S. Personal Incomes Rise, Top '48 Rate

By The Associated Press

Personal incomes, the mainspring of consumer buying power, increased in June, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The rise helped push such incomes for the first six months of 1949 to a level 2.6 per cent higher than the first half of boom-time 1948.

The report estimated that the flow of personal income from all sources reached an annual rate of $213,500,000,000 in June. For the period January through June, 1949, the annual rate was $213,400,000,000.

A study of the Commerce Department figures showed that the upturn had been going on for three months, April through June, and that the gain accelerated as it continued.

Farm Incomes Cited

An increase in farm income was cited by the department as the main cause of the June increase in personal income as compared with May, for which the annual rate was $212,900,000,000. Farm income went up, the department said, because of an increased volume of crops sold or placed under Government loan.

Perhaps more significantly, however, factory payrolls were credited with a slight increase in June after having declined steadily since last September. Wages rose in the nondurable goods industries and steadied in the durable goods lines, the department said.

Dividend payments to investors also were up in June, as were most other sources of personal income—receipts of owners of unincorporated business, net rents received by landlords, and practically everything from paychecks to relief checks going to persons as distinguished from corporations.

This strengthening in consumer buying power furnished background for a psychological development reported by President Truman's chief economic adviser, Dr. Edwin G. Nourse.

Sentiment among businessmen has become "generally better," Dr. Nourse told reporters while calling at the White House with associates to give President Truman a fresh picture of the economic scene.

Market Rise Steady

Dr. Nourse cited the steady rise of the stock market in recent weeks as evidence of improvement in the sentiment of businessmen. For himself, the presidential adviser would say only that the general economic picture is little changed since the midyear report he and his associates furnished President Truman.

The White House went ahead with plans for combatting unemployment by concentrating on Federal spending in troubled areas.

Presidential Aide John R. Steelman released a letter to military procurement people and other spending agencies naming specific areas that could be helped by the concentration of Government outlays.

The Steelman letter set a standard for determining when a section is so troubled by unemployment as to require a transfusion of Federal dollars to pep up its economy.

The standard: Unemployment amounting to 12 per cent or more of the available labor force. That means that Federal aid should be given whenever as many as 12 in each 100 persons wanting jobs are unable to find them.

Steelman's new standard in effect defined as a "troubled" area any place where the unemployment problem is approximately twice as bad as that for a Nation as a whole, as reflected in the Census Bureau's national figures for July.

4,095,000 Idle

The bureau reported unemployment highest since early 1942, totaled 4,095,000 in a civilian labor force of 63,815,000. That would make the national unemployment approximately 6.4 per cent of the working population.

Steelman told the spending agencies that the places that need help to absorb unemployed workers are New Bedford, and Worcester, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Waterbury and Bridgeport in Connecticut, the Utica-Rome, N. Y., area, the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre, Pa., area; Muskegon, Mich., and Knoxville, Tenn.

Other areas will be designated later as data on labor situations are developed, Steelman told the agencies. He said, in fact, that the Lawrence, Mass., and Cumberland, Md., areas probably will be so classified.

Social Security Tax of 6½% by 1970 Voted

By the United Press

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday voted to raise Social Security taxes to 6½ per cent between now and January 1, 1970, with employers and employes each paying half of the tax.

The committee, which is in the final stages of preparing new old age and survivors insurance legislation, decided to increase the tax progressively from the 1 per cent now levied on employers and employes.

It also agreed on a cost-of-living increase of about 70 per cent for those who already are drawing retirement pay under Social Security.

Under present law, the 1 per cent Social Security tax paid by employers and employes would be increased to 1½ per cent on each, January 1, next, and to 2 per cent on January 1, 1952.

But the committee decided the 2 per cent schedule should become effective on January 1, 1951. On January 1, 1960, it would go to 2½ per cent on both employers and employes and on January 1, 1965, to 3 per cent on each.

A 3¼ per cent tax to become effective on January 1, 1970, would be the last increase.

Committee members said this schedule would keep the program on a sound financial basis.

The committee, which has been working for more than five months on revision of Social Security legislation, expects to have all its recommendations ready for formal approval within a day or two. The final bill will be a compromise version of President Truman's request.

The committee voted Monday to extend coverage to an additional 11 million persons and to raise the tax base from $3000 to $3600 a year.

Gold Medal Honors For Barkley Listed

The Senate completed congressional action yesterday on a bill authorizing a Gold Medal for Vice President Alben W. Barkley for his "distinguished public service and outstanding contribution to the general welfare."

As sent to President Truman for signing, it calls for an appropriation of $2500 to carry out the proposed honor.

14 Greeks Barred From Batory Sailing

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Federal Government officials today barred 14 Greeks from sailing on the Polish liner Batory—the vessel on which Communist Gerhart Eisler escaped last May.

Immigration Service officials would give no reason for the action.

The 14, most of them young, well-dressed men with lots of baggage, were halted at the gangplank an hour before the Batory sailed for Europe. They were taken to Immigration Service offices. All had Greek passports.

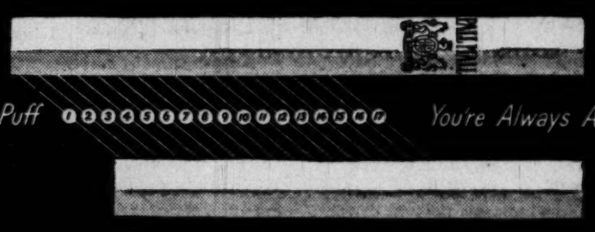
filters the smoke
and makes it mild

Don't let throat-scratch spoil your smoking enjoyment. You guard against it when you smoke PALL MALL. For PALL MALL's greater length travels the smoke further on its way to your throat—filters it naturally through PALL MALL's traditionally fine, mellow tobaccos—guards against throat-scratch.

Let your throat enjoy smooth smoking. PALL MALL's fine tobaccos give you a smoothness, mildness and satisfaction no other cigarette offers you. Ask for PALL MALL—the longer, finer cigarette in the distinguished red package.

PUFF BY PUFF... YOU'RE ALWAYS AHEAD
Take 5 puffs or 10... or 17... when you smoke PALL MALL



Study the puff chart . . . At the first puff, PALL MALL's smoke is filtered further than that of any other leading cigarette. Moreover, after 5 puffs of each cigarette—or 10, or 15, or 17—PALL MALL still gives you a longer, natural filter of fine tobaccos—guards against throat-scratch.

Outstanding—and they are mild!

Along Our Street
with Aunt Penny

Several families in the neighborhood have started a small playground for their children just up the street. So far, it only has a slide, two swings and a seesaw. But the children love it. I think they enjoy it all the more because they've learned how to share.

That's true of a lot of things with good neighbors, young and old. Take party-line telephone service, for instance. When we use our party lines in a spirit of "share and share alike," we can be pretty sure others on the line will do the same for us. By allowing a little time between calls (so that others may use the line) and by giving up the line quickly when someone needs it in an emergency, we make it possible for everybody to get his fair share of the service. Sharing pays dividends all along the line.

Office Building, and abandon the section of the present steam pipe tunnel that runs under 1st st. between Independence ave. se. and B st. se. Install new, larger steam lines and chilled water lines in the new tunnel. Increase the capacity of the air-conditioning plant from 4800-ton to 8800-ton capacity by adding two new compressor units an da cooling tower at the Capito power plant.

The plan was developed partly with an eye to the proposed new Senate Office Building, a project which the Senate now has decided to hold up for the present.

One result of the plan would be to open the way for air-conditioning the old Library of Congress Building, a move proposed since before the last war.

The program also calls for tying into the Capitol air conditioning system the Library of Congress Annex, the Supreme Court Building, and a wing of the existing Senate Office Building. Each of these now has its own air conditioning plant.

Engineers found the facilities in need of expansion. The Building Commission was also advised that the Library of Congress main building should be air conditioned in the near future as a protection to priceless documents.

The 16-million-dollar program is designed to eliminate many present hazards. Engineers found there is danger of a serious breakdown in the Capitol Power Plant, and in the steam distribution system. They advised that the recommended improvements be carried through promptly if heat, light and power service are not to be interrupted.

The Capitol Power Plant, operating since 1910, supplies heat, light, power, and air-conditioning to the Capitol, the Senate and House Office Buildings. It supplies heat, light and power to the Library of Congress Buildings, Botanic Gardens, Supreme Court, and the Legislative Garage. It supplies steam heat to the Government Printing Office, and to the Washington City Post Office near Union Station.

The steam is generated in 16 boilers which have been in service since 1923, and according to the findings of the officials, they cannot be safely used much longer.

Electricity generated by two machines is 25 cycle alternating current, and more than half of it has to be converted to direct current for lighting and small motors. In the conversion there is a 25 per cent loss of power, totaling some five million kilowatt hours a year.

With the 25-cycle current, many types of modern lighting and up-to-date office machines cannot be used at all, and for those that can be used, special conversion equipment must be provided. Sometimes it costs more than the original device.

The experts found much of the wiring on Capitol Hill to be very old and in need of replacement. For example, in the Library of Congress, most of the 50-year-old original wiring is still in use. The original wiring is insulated in paper, and encased in iron pipes embedded in the masonry.

The experts estimated that it is costing the Government three times as much to generate its own electricity for Capitol Hill as it would to buy from Pepco, and two and one-half times as much as it would cost to generate electricity in a modernized Capitol Power Plant.

Besides danger of a breakdown in the power plant, the experts also found danger of a breakdown in the distribution system, particularly in the present steam tunnel.

They said the portion of the tunnel that runs from Independence ave. se. under 1st st. to B st. ne. is a hazard. It is 7 feet high, 4 and one-half feet wide, with concrete walls a foot thick. It is built on earth fill over the railroad tunnel through which trains run from the south into Union Station.

Vibration from trains below, and traffic above, has caused the tunnel to settle unevenly from 18 to 24 inches.

Under the proposed plan, this stretch of old tunnel would be abandoned entirely, and 5900 feet of new tunnel would be built, under North Carolina ave. se. to 2d st. and north on 2d st. to C st. ne., with branches to the buildings served. The existing tunnel from the Senate Office Building to the Government Printing Office and the section that runs from the power plant to the Old House Office Building would be kept in use. Some 20,000 feet of new piping would be needed, including larger steam lines designed for high-pressure operation.

Officials said the work could be done with the least interference to service over a 4-year period. At the outset, to speed up the conversion, about 4000 kilowatt hours, or one third of the peak load, would be shifted to Pepco.

The Building Commission was told Pepco would provide the service on a strictly temporary basis, using the source from which it supplies streetcar power.

Two new steam boilers would go in the space of four present boilers; the other 12 would be left until further expansion is needed.

Surprise For Dolly

Those in charge have announced that in architectural spirit, the new White House is to be the simple and majestic mansion of 1810. Ornate decorations of later years in the form of cupids and reclining nudes are to be removed from frescoes, public rooms are to be paneled with historic wood, the grand staircase is to be given a more impressive sweep. Dolly Madison's shade would feel at home in this Georgian inspired building, for on the surface it will look much as it did when she presided at the Nation's first White House inaugural ball.

Yet, if Dolly began to prowl around, she would get many a shock. In the restored old brick kitchen, first cooked in by Abigail Adams, she might find a President giving a "fireside chat" into a small instrument that was carrying his voice to millions throughout the world. Or in this erstwhile kitchen she might find a movie being shown to a group of guests. Almost anywhere she would run into a wooden cabinet with a small screen in which events in far-off places were being pictured. In other rooms she would see men conversing through small black instruments with other men in London, Paris, Tokyo—possibly, though not likely, Moscow. If it were summer, she would find the atmosphere strangely cool—owing to an air conditioning plant in the basement. If a party were on, the Marine Band's music would follow her through the house by means of an amplifying system. On a mezzanine deck she would find, of all things, a dentist's office and a barber shop! If she peeked into the bedrooms, she would find bowls and pitchers superseded by glass tile baths.

Yes, Dolly would be surprised. But she would no doubt feel proud of her own day—a day good enough for a White House to hark back to in some things while pushing on into the machine age in others.

Loyalty Licensing

Public Law 525, Eightieth Congress, approved May 12, 1948, and effective as of April 1, 1949, provides that merchant marine radio-telegraph operators must be licensed by Coast Guard local inspection boards as well as by the Federal Communications Commission. Since the local boards had been abolished nearly two years before the law was passed, the licenses are actually issued or denied on the determination of the Commandant of the Coast Guard.

The FCC license is a certificate of technical competence, and is one of the prerequisites for obtaining a Coast Guard license. Other requirements are that the applicant be a United States citizen 19 years old or more, be validly employed or to be employed as a radio-telegraph operator at sea, be free from certain physical diseases and defects, and have recommendations attesting to his character from present or previous employers or ships' officers. The Coast Guard license, thus, is a certificate that the commandant is satisfied upon full consideration that the applicant's "character, habits of life, and physical condition are such as to authorize the belief that he is a suitable and safe person to be entrusted with the powers and duties of such a station" as radio-telegraph operator on any vessel.

In three cases which have recently been decided and appealed, the commandant has held that an acknowledged Communist, a former Communist whose affiliation with the party ended 11 years ago, and a man who declines to say whether he is a Communist or not, are not suitable and safe persons to hold such private employment. The reasoning behind this decision, like that behind the law which authorizes it, is fairly clear. Since the United States merchant marine in time of war is a vital organ of defense and offense, it should be cleansed of potential fifth columnists and the Government must take steps necessary to cleanse it.

This, we submit, is dangerous reasoning and a dangerious precedent, especially in time of peace. The powers and duties of a ship's radio-telegraph operator are such that he might do a certain amount of mischief if he were so minded. But not a great deal, and certainly far less than persons in any number of other types of private employment. A railroad freight dispatcher, for example, could gum things up pretty badly. Should he, therefore, be subject to loyalty test and licensing by the Government in time of peace? A commercial network radio engineer could do real sabotage, and is, furthermore, already licensed for professional competence. Should he also be licensed for loyalty?

Rumor, as everyone had it impressed on him in the recent war, can be a potent weapon for damaging the military security of the Nation. Among those people who hold licenses from lesser Government units, barbers are highly effective rumor-mongers if they are so minded. Should barbers, then, be certified by the Government as "suitable and safe persons" for employment in their chosen profession? The question is not so absurd as it sounds at first. The principle is exactly the same: It is that a person of whom the Government does not approve can be denied private employment in time of peace at any job the Government decides is in some way involved in national defense. And that, today, can include anything.

Americans In China

The new movement in Congress to help Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalists in China comes at a most unfortunate moment. For a long time back we have opposed military aid to Chiang, and for a number of reasons. Arms to the Nationalists would fall into the hands of the Communists, and might indeed expedite the collapse of all China, for American arms have been shown to have a sale value for would-be deserters. Arms to the Nationalists would recommit the United States to a policy which is thoroughly bankrupt and full of danger to the American security. Arms to the Nationalists would go to men who refuse to help themselves, as shown by the way Chiang Kai-shek withdrew his forces across the Yangtze, and left Nanking to its fate, and is now withdrawing all his resources to Formosa, leaving Canton more and more unprotected. Arms to the Nationalists represent a profligate way of pouring down the drain the hard-earned money of the American people. Now, however, there is another reason to deprecate the arms-to-Chiang movement, and that is that any further display of military adventuring on the side of Chiang Kai-shek may jeopardize the lives of the harassed Americans in China.

The White Paper on China has a reference to the manner in which General Marshall's mission of mediation was bedeviled by the interventionism which has been aroused again among Republicans in Congress in spite of the revelations of the White Paper. In 1946 new arrangements on lend-lease were being discussed in Congress on the basis of helping Chiang Kai-shek in his struggle with the Communists. The discussions led to the signing of an agreement August 30, 1946, for the sale of surplus equipment of all kinds to Chiang Kai-shek. This was not enough for the pro-Chiang group in Congress. They wanted and obtained legislative authority for the 1000-man military advisory group which, as the White Paper shows, gave valuable but ignored advice to Chiang when military operations engulfed the country. There were anti-American demonstrations in Shanghai while these matters were under discussion in Washington. The reactionary Nationalists turned intransigeant. They used the debate as the occasion for "pressing the Generalissimo to push forward with a campaign of extermination against the Communists." The Communists on their side maintained that legislation was "reinforcing the National government's tendency to deal with the Communists by force and was thus contributing to all-out civil war."

The situation at present is somewhat different. The Communists seem not to be not so much worried about help to Chiang Kai-shek as infuriated by the continuing spectacle of American aid. Up till a few weeks ago, apparently, arms were still being landed in Nationalist areas in fulfillment of the last Aid-to-China Act. This is putting an edge on the anti-Americanism now being exhibited by the Communists which at any time might have grave repercussions. Congress in these days ought to recognize that the lives of Americans in China are in jeopardy. It is their safety that should be of first concern to the legislature as well as the executive. Last winter, when the danger signals were being flown, we urged that what we called zones of security for Americans should be established, and we included Shanghai. We contrasted the way that we were being "brave as a lion in backing with arms a dying regime in Nanking, thereby risking a tremendous diplomatic defeat, and meek as a lamb when Americans were endangered." The lack of protective policy is now boomeranging, and while the State Department is trying desperately to figure out some method either of protecting our nationals or of withdrawing them—as we assume it must be—it ill behooves members of Congress to make one of the most delicate situations in the American history more delicate.

Mr. Hoover: 75

Today will be the seventy-fifth birthday anniversary of our only living former President, Mr. Herbert Hoover. The observance which will take place at the Capitol seems to us an altogether proper recognition of the many services that Mr. Hoover has rendered his country throughout three quarters of a century.

The American political system, as has often been observed, offers very little opportunity to the talents and energies of former Presidents. Such cases as those of President John Quincy Adams, who made a new career for himself as a member of the House of Representatives, and of President Taft, who made one on the Supreme Court, are altogether exceptional. Yet, narrow as the opportunities are, Mr. Hoover has made the most of them. His latest achievement has been as head of the commission to study the reorganization of the executive branch of the Government, the sort of job to which he is eminently suited.

It is now 16½ years since Mr. Hoover left the Presidency, and these have been among the most fateful years in human history. For many of these years he remained in the imagination of his countrymen a symbol of the depression and the failure of the whole philosophy of American business. The truth, which is now being recognized, is that Mr. Hoover and his policies played very little part in bringing on the great financial and economic catastrophe of 1929-32. However, since he and his party had made capital of the false prosperity of the preceding years, it was perhaps a kind of justice that they should be blamed for its collapse.

Mr. Hoover, for all his intelligence and abilities, had always lacked those qualities which appeal to the imagination of the masses, and the efforts of politicians and journalists to endow him with the "color" that Americans demand in their public figures were neither happy nor successful. Out of office, however, Mr. Hoover could afford to be himself, to speak precisely as he felt and thought, and the result has been a great growth in his public stature and respect.

When Mr. Hoover was a Cabinet officer and candidate for President much was made by his political enemies of the long absences from his country during his earlier career as an engineer. It was said that he had lost touch with the American genius, that he had become in a sense denationalized. Yet, both in his qualities and in his limitations, he has shown himself the most characteristic American of his generation, deeply devoted to all the native pieties. This has been reflected in his extroverted energies, in the essentially pragmatic character of his mind, his implicit faith in progress and in the power of technology to solve the age-old problems of human poverty and suffering.

Privacy of The Home

Fearing that the recent decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District in the Geraldine Little case may cripple the health inspection service, the District is appealing to the Supreme Court. We doubt the wisdom of such a protest against the principles that Judges Prettyman and Proctor laid down. In our opinion, their vigorous application of the Fourth Amendment so as to require health inspectors to get a search warrant before entering a private residence over the protest of the occupant deserves commendation rather than challenge. Our Health Department could make a good impression by putting it into effect without further ado.

The question before the Court of Appeals was whether a health officer may inspect a private home without a warrant if the owner or occupant objects. The Supreme Court has made it unmistakably plain in other cases that Government officers may not invade a private residence without a warrant, unless they are in hot pursuit of a suspected felon. Judge Prettyman based his opinion on the assumption that to search a private home for garbage is no less unreasonable than to search it for arms, stolen goods or gambling equipment. "If private homes are opened to the intrusion of Government enforcement officials, at the wish of those officials, without the intervening mind and hand of a magistrate," he rightly said, "one prop of the structure of our system is gone and an outstanding characteristic of another form of government will have been substituted."

In a dissenting opinion Judge Holtzoff contended that the Fourth Amendment's restrictions upon unreasonable searches and seizures "apply only to criminal prosecutions and proceedings of a quasi-criminal nature for the enforcement of penalties." In other words, a warrant is necessary in order to search a home for evidence of crime, but it is not necessary in order to search for something else or just to search. No such distinction seems valid. The basic purpose of this constitutional restraint on governmental agents is to protect the privacy of the home. That privacy may be invaded by a health inspector no less than a policeman.

Undoubtedly the ruling will cause the Health Department some inconvenience. But the great majority of citizens will probably continue to admit health inspectors voluntarily, as they have done in the past. Only in the exceptional case of a refusal to admit the inspector will it be necessary to have a warrant. In that limited number of cases, the rudiments of fair play seem to us to demand that a warrant be sought before a citizen is punished for refusing to admit an inspector.

Senatorial Gesture

Political campaigns pit able and honest men against one another much more frequently than the conventions of politics make it possible to acknowledge. Thus there is something agreeably novel in the cordial indorsement uttered on the floor of the Senate Monday by Senator Robert C. Hendrickson of the man whom he defeated last year in New Jersey's senatorial contest, Col. Archibald S. Alexander. Colonel Alexander has been nominated to the post of Assistant Secretary of the Army by President Truman. "Without reflecting upon anyone heretofore appointed by the President to high office," Senator Hendrickson said, "I know of no nomination made during the Truman Administration which is more commendable." And he urged the Senate to confirm the nomination unanimously. The praise seems creditable to its author no less than to its subject, and we should think that the Senate would do well to follow its advice. From everything we have heard, Colonel Alexander is an admirable choice.

Record In China

What could have been done for China that was not done? For instance, should our Government, knowing the harsh truth, have sent billions of dollars more down the drain where the other three or four billions went? Or to be again siphoned off into the pockets of private persons? Or should it have established a "government in China" to insure that our "help" functioned properly? These questions, it seems to me, answer themselves.

In the circumstances the Administration could not have done more and differently. Regrettable as the result in China is, it was, after all, brought about by the actions of the Chinese people, who have been adult in governing themselves, good and bad, for a long time.

Critics of the Nationalist administration, in their zeal and for the sake of free opinion, may be allowed to "shade off" a bit; but many comments on the Chinese situation persist in calling white black, and vice versa, which is dangerous. For while we are working hard trying to save democracy abroad, ours at home may be compromised.

Swimming Deaths

For many years nobody seems to have been concerned about the number of children drowned each year in the Washington rivers. Now Harry Wender and Congressman Hoffman are alarmed because white children are taking to the rivers and streams since the close of the Anacostia Pool.

During a four-year period, 1945-1948, 37 boys of school ages, 5 to 19, were drowned in Anacostia River, Kingman Lake or the lower Potomac. Of these 37, 29 were colored boys or 79.7 per cent. Thirteen were of junior high school ages, of these 12 were colored boys.

These children were killed yearly because they were denied use of the only supervised swimming pools where tens of thousands of them live. The martyrdom of these dead should bear heavily on the conscience of the segregationists who would deny to colored citizens the right to use public tax-supported facilities in any area of our Nation's Capital.

"Bollingen Blues"

Your July 31 editorial, "Bollingen Blues," is shot through with a kind of snobbery which may be more dangerous to the national character than anything Mr. Ezra Pound might perpetrate. It is the snobbery which maintains that, while the incomprehensibility, to all but a handful of highly skilled persons, of much scientific literature is justifiable because it leads to presumably beneficial changes in man's material culture—yet arbitrary limits of comprehensibility can properly be set to the work of poets.

I happen to find Pound's Cantos an uneven poem, full of very bad passages, redeemed by sporadic great ones. But my quarrel is not with your estimate of Pound. It is with your implicit kowtowing to the tyranny of the impresarios of a mass-produced "kulchur" functioning in accordance with nonliterary, capitalist values, who continually seek to drown all genuine creative activity in an ocean of kitsch, and to translate into the language of kitsch whatever they find it impossible to destroy.

Unfortunately, it takes work to read poetry adequately and well—work, knowledge, and time; and this is as true of a poem as simple as the Ancient Mariner as it is of Eliot, Pound, or Allen Tate. Poetry is a specialized way of looking at the world; which, like all human disciplines, has been growing more specialized over time. There is no more reason to suppose that one can pick up its techniques as easily as breathing than there is to suppose that one can master nuclear physics by reading about it in Life.

Editor's Note: We find ourselves utterly unable to follow the logic of the professor's complaint. He seems to be saying that by deploring the use of gibberish by poets, we are necessarily defending the use of jargon by the authors of scientific or technological works. This seems to us a most curious reasoning. It is almost as though the professor had accused us of defending the beating of husbands because we have on occasion deplored the beating of wives.

"Bailey Case"

Permit me to commend you upon your August 3 editorial on the case of Miss Dorothy Bailey, who was deprived of her position in the Government under the "loyalty program" of the Administration. It is indeed shocking to learn that the Chairman of the Board of Review admitted that he did not know the informants, the details of the accusations and whether or not the statements were under oath; but that he relied solely upon the recommendations of the FBI. This reveals star-chamber methods that outrage the American sense of fairness and constitute a grave danger to civil liberty.

Highway Safety

The August 3 bus, tractor-trailer truck and car accident is another grim reminder of America's No. 1 problem.

In a civilization based on agriculture, trailer-tractor trucks and other slow-moving vehicles are as necessary on highways as freight trains on railroad tracks, but must our citizens have a tentative appointment with death each time they ride in a bus or car?

It is noted when tracks must be cleared for an express, the freight train takes the siding and waits for the all-clear signal.

Possibly, construction of block sidings on highways with changeable speed limit signals to warn of hazards in the block might help.

Welfare Department

All over the country today, people working in the fields of health, welfare and education are experiencing a bitter disappointment because of the action of the Senate Expenditures Committee in recommending against Reorganization Plan No. 1 to elevate the Federal Security Agency to a department of welfare.

It seems most unfortunate that the wholly irrelevant issue of health insurance should be permitted to confuse the simple issue of giving these functions the prestige and recognition of Cabinet representation. No program of health insurance can be undertaken by the proposed department or any other Federal agency unless Congress enacts a law for that purpose, which is not soon likely. On the other hand the present social insurance and grant-in-aid programs of the Federal Security Agency, widely supported and noncontroversial in character, have reached a scope which leaders in these fields have long felt warranted a regular department at the Cabinet level.

As evidence of this support the following is pertinent: In 1947 the American Council on Education and the National Social Welfare Assembly, central clearing house organizations for virtually all national associations in these fields, set up a joint committee composed of a group of distinguished and representative leaders in all areas of health, welfare and education. Many meetings were held, a careful report was prepared and recommendations made for a combined department as proposed in Reorganization Plan No. 1. Among other things this report recommended that "an executive department of health, education and security, headed by a secretary of Cabinet rank, be established at this time by the Congress of the United States" and further "that this objective be accomplished by legislation converting the existing Federal Security Agency into such an executive department and transferring the powers and duties of the agency and its administrator to the new department and its secretary." This is exactly what Reorganization Plan No. 1 does.

Earlier in 1945 the committee on reorganization of community services of the Woman's Foundation of which Mrs. Agnes Meyer and Dr. Leonard Mayo, vice president of Western Reserve University, served as cochairman likewise recommended "an inclusive Federal Department of Education, Health, Recreation, Welfare and Social Insurance." This committee, likewise, was composed of distinguished representatives in these fields. Many previous proposals had been made going back to the Harding Administration.

At the recent hearings on Reorganization plan No. 1 statements in behalf of the plan were submitted by the following organizations among others: American Public Health Association, American Council on Education, American Public Welfare Association, Congress of Industrial Organizations, American Federation of Labor, American Legion, Family Service Association of of America, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Council of Social Action of the Congregational Church, American Association of Social Workers, National Federation of Settlements, Disabled American Veterans.

I have cited these facts as evidence that this proposal for a department of welfare represents the historical culmination of long-felt aspiration on the part of an important segment of American life.

It is hoped that the Senate will recognize this proposal as such, and permit the plan to become law, thus giving to millions of Americans the reassurance that the welfare of our own people is a concern of government on an equal footing with our foreign affairs, our national defense, agriculture, business, labor, natural resources and law enforcement.

Growing Need —Half A Job

By Malvina Lindsay

Live And Work Trend

BRING UP the bread and butter problem of the older man or woman living on a small pension, income, social security allotment, or bounty of relatives and everyone is ready with the pet solution—a part-time job. Mention the married woman who needs and wants to help out the family income (as wives traditionally did in rural America), yet has household and family duties that prevent her being away from home all day or every day, and there is the immediate suggestion—part-time work.

Decry the frustration of the highly skilled professional woman who is letting her talents get rusty, depriving society of her special contribution, because she cannot leave home and family for a high pressure, eight-hour-a-day job and there is always the answer, a part-time career. Then there are the rapidly increasing ambitious boys and girls from low income homes who want to work their way through college or even high school. Here again the part-time job is taken for granted.

Yet try to get a part-time job. It may be reasonably easy if you are a student, a household worker, a baby sitter or a door-to-door salesman on your own. But otherwise, offices, factories, stores, banks, hospitals, newspapers, Government departments can't be bothered with you. You don't fit into the step-on-the-gas production schedules of modern industry. You make too much extra paper work, record-keeping. You create problems about vacations, bonuses, pensions, washroom and locker space.

Despite this negative attitude by industry, there is now a rising demand that more part-time work be developed. This is not confined to seekers of part-time jobs. It is part of a general economic looking ahead by vocational authorities, who see the need of making productive a great mass of citizens, including older persons and married women, who may lack either stamina or time for full-time jobs.

Unless part-time work is developed on a larger scale the whole burden of support of the elderly and of youth will fall on a relatively small group of the younger middle-aged. If social security rules were liberalized to permit recipients of old-age insurance to earn more, (as is provided in the new House bill, and more part-time work made available, the financial burden of the country's aging population would be lightened.

The main impetus for part-time work has so far come from women. Partly as a result of requests from their organizations, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor has begun a study of part-time employment opportunities for women in this country. Household employment will not be included since a study in that field two years ago included part-time developments.

IN FACT the part-timers are busy on several fronts A new job placement service that will concentrate on locating skilled college educated women in part-time jobs that will fit in with their home life has been started in New York. It has an impressive list of board members with Evans Clark, director of the Twentieth Century Fund, as chairman. Later the organization hopes to open branches in other cities.

The Graduate Chapter of Radcliffe College has made a survey of part-time opportunities for college women. and has found these to be best in museums, libraries and churches. This survey did not go into those fields not requiring college education, as seasonal merchandise selling, stenography, substitute teaching.

A plea to educated and skilled women to fight for part-time work was recently made by Mrs. Eva B. Hansl in a study published by the Women's Press of the Y. W. C. A. One way of doing this, Mrs. Hansl points out, is to produce an adequate supply of "first-rate part-timers" to whom employers will listen.

Also, the growing movement among the "Forty Plus" and similar organizations to keep older men and women in regular jobs is giving more attention to part-time opportunities for such older persons as can get along without full-time work.

The way in which many domestic workers have changed into part-time work from the old round-the-clock, sleep-in status might herald a more general trend of that nature. Even though most employers, especially those in industry, want the standardized 40-hour-a-week man or woman, the fact that the would-be part-timers are speaking up bodes that some change is on the way.

Sacrament Denial

You reported on August 5 an event surely unique in history. A Communist government has severely punished a priest for not giving the Sacraments to a member of the Communist Party. Thus a government which condemns religious rites as deceptions and lies is insisting on their being administered to a member of its own party. Priests have often been martyred for giving the Sacraments; it is a new variety of persecution to be martyred for not giving them.

It would have been immeasably more logical and edifying to discipline the Communist who asked for them. It is true, of course, that he was shortly to depart from the jurisdiction of his government in any case, but the departure could have been accelerated.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Gregarious Mr. Barkley

Childs

JUST ABOUT a year ago there was a great deal of head-shaking and solemn doubt-casting by the politicators and the pundits over an event that had occurred shortly before in Philadelphia. The Democrats had nominated for Vice President Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, 70 years old, obviously too old for a strenuous campaign.

The convenient explanation was that since no one expected President Truman to be re-elected in any event, it was a pleasant honor to cap the career of a friendly man who had labored long in the Democratic vineyard. It would look nice in Barkley's record in Who's Who.

In the intervening months Vice President Barkley has made a lot of us regret those foolish words. His energy at the age of 71 has become a national phenomenon, like Niagara Falls.

Already he has traveled farther; made more speeches, crowned more queens, kissed more babies and more pretty girls than any other Vice President in history. And he shows no signs at all of slacking his pace.

HIS ENGAGEMENT calendar through the torrid summer days is almost as crowded as it was in the spring when he was getting into his stride.

Here is a partial list beginning with the official opening of summer:

June 21, delivered the commencement address at Miami-Jacobs College, Dayton, Ohio; his twelfth commencement address, each one on a different topic.

June 25, addressed Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner in St Louis.

July 1, addressed Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner at Columbia, S. C.

July 4, was principal speaker at Leslie Biffle Day, in Pigott, Ark.

July 15, addressed crowd at West Kentucky Fair, at Paducah, Ky., the Vice President's home town.

July 23, presided as grand marshal at the Aquatennial at Minneapolis, Minn. (On the way back to Washington he stopped to have lunch with an attractive widow and thereby set in motion a new train or rumor about the possibility of his marriage.)

July 27, addressed banquet of National Association of Credit Jewelers in Cricago.

July 28, crowned the queen of the 200th anniversary of the town of Culpeper, Va., and made what his secretary lists as "brief remarks."

THIS DOES NOT include the parties he looked in on, the occasions he graced by brief appearances, the extemporaneous remarks at small off-the-record lunches. It does not include ceremonial greetings and salutations which the Vice President dispenses to arriving and departing visitors.

This Capital is always inclined to look for hidden, and preferably sinister, motives behind any conduct that deviates in the least from the normal. But the Vice President's motivation seems to be nothing more than a vast gregariousness, and expansive geniality.

He likes to please people and if he can please them merely by his presence and by the mellow sound of his voice lifted in those few brief remarks (usually not so brief), then he is happy. One difficulty is that he must now say "no" far more often than he can say "yes."

From 40 to 50 invitations a day come to the Vice President, the majority beseeching him to grace large public gatherings with his presence. If an honorarium (in the lecture industry this word is preferred to the common and vulgar expression, fee) is offered, the Vice President customarily declines it and usually he pays his own expenses. His annual salary of $30,000 is taxable, although he does get an additional allowance of $10,000, which is tax free, for expenses incidental to office.

The cynical are inclined to sneer at the Veep's ceaseless activity. They regard it as absurd and futile. But if it relieves the President of part of the burden of the ceremonial and public phase of that excessively burdensome office, then the Vice President's travels may even have a practical value.

When the nomination came to him, Senator Barkley remarked ruefully that the Vice Presidency was at best a "cold biscuit." He has warmed it up and made it into a popular national dish.

Matter Of Fact

Salute To Senator McKellar

NOW THAT the ECA has lurched past the hazards of the Senate, it is timely to take a look at the strange process by which this result was achieved. The reader should be warned that this is an alarming experience. For if the greatest measures of American policy are always to be handled as the ECA was handled, our Government must eventually collapse under the weight of its own idiocy.

A good place to begin this melancholy inquiry is with the experience of Paul Hoffman, the brilliant administrator of the European Recovery Program. Hoffman draws his grossly inadequate Government salary for directing the vast effort to put Europe on its feet. But for the last six months he has had to forget about Europe and spend his whole time playing lobbyist.

On a rough estimate, he has spent all but about two hours of every working day since the beginning of the congressional session in the committee rooms and anterooms of the Senate and House. So have most of the other men, like William Foster and Tyler Wood, who are supposed to make the ECA program work. Nor is this particularly surprising, since Hoffman and his subordinates have had to justify their program, item by item, to no less than four successive committees—the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the House Foreign Affairs Committee, the House Appropriations Committee and the Senate Appropriations Committee.

IT IS shocking enough that the highest executives of the most important Government on earth should have to do jobs of this sort in quadruplicate. One explanation of any program ought to be enough. But it is downright intolerable that honorable and hard-working officials should be subjected to the sort of thing Hoffman and his subordinates met with in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The ECA staff spent a full month in this lair of senility and reaction. When they were not being bullied by Wherry of Nebraska, or badgered by Bridges of New Hampshire, or sniped at by McCarran of Nevada, they were receiving the famous McKellar treatment. Dozing and bulldozing are the two specialties of the Senate Appropriations Committee's aging chairman, Senator Kenneth McKellar, when he has witnesses before him. The following is a fair sample of the kind of McKellar-Hoffman dialogue that literally went on for weeks:

McKellar: Can you control the brooms in France; that is the brooms sold in France, those sold in Morocco, those sold in Belgium, those sold in Poland, those sold in Czechoslovakia? Do you control the output of brooms?

Hoffman (modestly): No sir, we do not.

At various times Senator McKellar also implied that Hoffman was a liar, urged him to resign, and rather oddly charged him with encroaching on the senatorial prerogative of declaring war on France. But the bit about brooms was particularly significant, because this McKellar passion for statistics on European broom consumption was of course aroused by a broom manufacturer somewhere in Tennessee. This is one of the great features of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Its members are supposed to see to the finances of the United States. They actually spend far more of their time seeing to the interests of special groups to whom they feel friendly.

WITH THE possible exception of Senator Kem's so-called free enterprise amendment, every one of the amendments that nearly crippled the ECA represented the efforts of a Senator or Senators to curry favor with a minority group. And this phenomenon is by no means limited to our great foreign policy enactments.

Senator Bridges and his friends have used their positions on the Appropriations Committee, for example, to please the power interests by cutting the gizzard out of the national power program. The tendency is growing constantly, for the Appropriations Committees and especially the Senate Committee, to cripple great national policies by this sort of hole-and-corner legislating. Vice President Barkley's ruling that the crippling ECA amendments were out of order represents a temporary check. But the Congress as a whole must assert itself if the Appropriations Committees are to be brought back to their intended function.

Indeed, the ECA experience suggests that the Congress as a whole should assert itself on an even broader front. During the ECA hearings there were men on the Senate Appropriations Committee like Carl Hayden of Arizona and Willis Robertson of Virginia who behaved honorably and intelligently. But the vast, complex machinery of Government cannot conceivably go on working forever, if only the minority are honorable and intelligent.

Government by bear-garden is not good enough. If the Congress does not set its house in order, the country will eventually have to pay a heavy penalty. We cannot always get by, by the skin of Senator McKellar's teeth.

New Surgery Developed for Faulty Hearts

blood trunkline. American surgeons, wrestling with the problem, dropped their own experiments to adopt Crawford's solution.

Today, heart surgeons everywhere are performing these operations. One team in Washington alone has done 57 operations for patent ductus. Dr. Blalock's "blue" baby operations are done here, just as they are in Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and other large medical centers of the nation. Surgery for coarctation of the aorta has become almost a daily item on the operating room schedules of some large hospitals.

Patent ductus arteriosus simply means an open duct for blood coming from the heart. In prebirth stage the body needs the short escape route between the aorta and pulmonary artery to by-pass the unaired lungs. After birth when the lungs begin their function of purifying the blood, the duct closes off.

Occasionally, for unknown reasons, this duct fails to close. The defect short-changes the body of fresh blood, places a heavier load on the heart.

Persons alive at 17 with a patent ductus have a life expectancy about half of that of the general population.

The condition, Dr. Gross reported, can readily be detected in auscultation (ear to chest) as a rumbling murmur. He first corrected the condition in 1938 by ligating (tying) the ductus at its center. In later operations, to end any danger of the knot working loose, he tied the artery in two places and severed it between the two knots.

Dr. Blalock's operation, which has been more widely publicized because of its dramatic appeal, actually creates an artificial patent ductus to circumvent other malfunctions of the disordered heart. He simply re-plumbed the heart to better but not normal function.

The condition for which the Blalock operation was devised is known as the tetralogy of Fallot, a combination of abnormalities which account for seven of every 10 "blue" babies.

They include an opening in the septal wall, normally a closed wall of muscle between the two sides of the heart, overriding of the aorta (its opening lies between the two lower heart chambers (centricles) instead of within the left ventricle), hardening and thickening of the walls of the right ventricle, and pulmonary stenosis, or unnatural narrowing of the pulmonary artery which carries blood from the heart to the lungs.

Dr. Blalock's operation makes no attempt to do anything about the unnatural admixture of used and purified blood which occurs because of the opening between the ventricles. It does provide an artificial channel to get more blood into the lungs for aeration than can pass through the narrowed pulmonary artery.

The Johns Hopkins heart surgeon found he could safely sever one of the early lead-off arteries from the aorta, curve it back and join it to the malformed pulmonary artery beyond the point of constriction.

With the union complete, the blood that surges up through the aorta courses strong back through this branch into the pulmonary artery to carry an ample stream of blood to the lungs for new oxygen instead of the trickle which formerly got through.

Dr. Blalock chose the artery which normally supplies the right shoulder and arm with blood. It branches out of the innominate artery, the first artery branch of the aorta after the coronary arteries.

Collateral circulation, by which the body's blood circulatory system spreads out through devious branches to carry blood to areas deprived of it at its normal source, makes the arterial shunt operation possible.

Dr. Willis J. Potts of Children's Memorial Hospital, Chicago, overcomes the same heart abnormalities somewhat differently, but with the same basic principle. Instead of reshunting the blood to the pulmonary artery by use of the right shoulder artery he joins the pulmonary artery side by side with the aorta, carefully cuts a hole at the joining, and sews the edges together.

The Potts' aortic clamp pinches off the flow of blood where the arteries are to be joined. It does permit sufficient blood to surge through the unpinched portion to carry on the processes of body blood circulation during operation.

Operating time for the two techniques is about the same, two to four hours, of which only 20 to 30 minutes is required in making the actual blood detour.

The Potts' technique is today considered by some the surgery of choice for infant "blue" babies since arteries in the very young may not be as large as are needed. The Chicago surgeon's method permits him to fit the passageway (hole) to the demands.

Surgeons still aren't certain today, five years after the first "blue" baby operation, just how much extra life they have added to their patients' life expectancy. They do know that dogs who develop much faster than humans have passed from pup to adult growth stages without separation of the man-made unions.

A month before Dr. Blalock performed his "blue" baby operation on a human, Dr. Crawford in Stockholm had worked out the surgery for coarctation of the aorta.

The congenital defect is an acute narrowing of the body's chief bloodline beyond its arch and the branch arteries for the head, chest and arms. The narrowed portion is generally short, just a bottleneck in an otherwise normal-sized bloodway.

Most likely the victim has grown from infancy without knowing of it. He has no pains or other sensation to warn him. Nature has taken care of his lower body blood by collateral circulation, the increased activity of compensating bloodways.

But whether he knows of it or not, the coarctation is cutting into his life expectancy and threatening with early incapacitation. It leads to an enlarged heart; may bring on cerebral (brain) hemorrhage from increased blood pressure, and has, though rarely, ended in death-dealing rupture at the stricture.

Coarctation of the aorta is most often uncovered on routine heart examinations. It's immediately suspected when blood pressure reading of the legs is lower than those readings taken on the arms.

Today's operation for coarctation of the aorta is painstaking but no more dangerous than other chest surgery. It takes two to four hours to accomplish, and usually consists of clamping off the large vessel at both ends of the narrowed part, snipping out that portion, and sewing the open ends together.

Swiss Arrest Berne Man For Spying

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 9 (U.P.)—A high postoffice official has been arrested as a spy for a foreign power and other government officials are believed to be involved, it was disclosed today.

The government announced that Emil Steiner, 59, supervisor in the general postoffice, was arrested July 15 on the charge that he supplied a foreign power with copies of confidential cablegrams.

No hint was given of the power for which Steiner was believed to be working.

Unconfirmed reports said that he worked for the United States, but there was no way to verify this since nations do not publicly acknowledge their spies.

The government's communique said Steiner "confessed to have been working as a spy for a foreign power before and during the war and right up to the day he was arrested."

Investigation established that he delivered military, political and economical data and was guilty of having violated his oath of official secrecy, the communique said.

Other sources said Steiner's career as a spy dated back to 1924.

Official circles believed Steiner probably had accomplices in various government departments and said further developments were expected.

Lawyers, AFL Indorse Clark For Court Post

By the United Press

Lawyers, judges and the American Federation of Labor yesterday indorsed the nomination of Attorney General Tom C. Clark to the Supreme Court vacancy caused by the death of Justice Frank Murphy.

The Senate Judiciary Committee opened hearings on the nomination, wth left-wing groups registering the only opposition. Among those asking to speak against confirmation were the American Communist Party, whose leaders are being prosecuted in New York City, and O. John Rogge, former Assistant Attorney General under Clark.

No organized Republican opposition is expected in the Senate, and confirmation appears assured. Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) has been named to take Clark's Justice Department post. Hearings on McGrath's nomination will be held later.

Clark was not present as Committee Counsel J. G. Sourwine read a long list of telegrams supporting Clark, among them one from AFL President William Green calling the nomination "an excellent one."

Few Unions Protest

The CIO did not specifically indorse Clark, but Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey informed the committee the union organization has filed no protest nor authorized anyone to do so. He said a "few unions" have lodged protests.

There was no word from United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis, who has twice been prosecuted by Clark, but a UMW newspaper said last week that the Senate would be "doing this country a real service" if it refused to confirm the nomination.

Telegrams from a score or more of Federal District and Circuit Court judges urged confirmation, as did the Federal Bar Association and the District of Columbia Bar Association.

The American Bar Association's special committee on the judiciary reported it "does not oppose" confirmation.

Other endorsements were received from Herbert Bayard Swope, New York industrialist, Chairman Edmond M. Hanrahan of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

The Civil Rights Congress, listed as a subversive organization by the Justice Department, accused Clark of using the department "to curtail and restrict civil liberties."

Negro singer Paul Robeson, in a statement released in New York, called the appointment "a gratuitous insult to my people."

The only witness appearing in person was Carol King, New York, general counsel of the American Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born, who opposed confirmation.

Others who said they want to testify in opposition included Rogge for himself and as spokesman for Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party, the Washington Book Shop, and the National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions. The latter two are listed by Clark as subversive.

Correction

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), was incorrectly quoted by the Associated Press Monday as having told the Senate that Norman Corwin had been "cited as Communist and subversive by the Attorney General of the United States."

Actually, McCarran said Corwin, a member of the radio division of the United Nations Information Department, has been associated with organizations which the Attorney General has cited variously as "Communist and subversive" or "Communist front."

Corwin in New York reiterated previous denials that he is a Communist and declared "I believe I am a vastly better patriot" than McCarran.

The Nevada Senator pointed to Corwin in his speech Monday as "characteristic of a number of people" who, he said, have gone "directly from fields of subversive activity" in this country into positions of authority in the U. N.

Walter Lippmann is on vacation. His column will be resumed in early September.

Abe Lincoln, Wife Would Get Refunds Under Senate Bill

By the United Press

Abe Lincoln would get a Government refund of $1003 and his wife $686.33 under a bill passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the House. Both are Navajo Indians.

Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) said that Lincoln and his wife were employed for a while by the Bureau of Indian Affairs at Fort Defiance, Ariz.

They paid salary deductions for living in Government quarters but Chavez said there were no such accommodations and that Mrs. Lincoln built her own adobe hut.

Folsom, Ruml To Head CED Research Unit

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Committee for Economic Development last night announced the election of Marion B. Folsom as chairman and Beardsley Ruml as vice chairman of its important Research and Policy Committee.

The research group formerly was headed by Philip D. Reed, board chairman, of General Electric Co. Under Reed's chairmanship during the past year, studies were issued on fiscal and monetary policies, tax and expenditure policies, the International Trade Organization, and other national problems.

Folsom

Folsom, treasurer of Eastman Kodak Co., served from 1944 to 1946 as staff director of the House of Representatives' special committee on postwar economic policy and planning. He also has served in other Government posts. He is one of the original members of CED and has filled several of its major positions.

Ruml, the new vice chairman of the Research and Policy Committee, recently resigned as board chairman of R. H. Macy & Co., and is presently board chairman of the Jewelry Research Foundation, Inc. He also has been active in CED activities.

PEOPLES DRUG: Jul. sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., totaled $3,960,937, a gain of $51,777 or 1.3 per cent over the same month last year. During July, the chain operated 142 stores against 138 in the same 1948 month. For the first seven months this year, Treasurer W. H. Churchill reported that sales aggregated $26,573,061, a gain of $692,177 or 2.7 per cent over the same 1948 period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Alan Ziegler, manager of the Washington ticket offices of United Air Lines, will resign on August 15 to become resident manager of the new Hotel Martinique at Miami Beach, Fla. Prior to joining UAL in 1941, Ziegler had been associated with various hotels, including the Mayflower and Dodge in this city . . . Donald G. Clark, director of purchases for the Gulf Oil Corp. since 1939, retired yesterday because of ill health . . . Max E. Youngstein, advertising and publicity director for Paramount ictures, Inc., will address the Advertising Club of Washington at a luncheon Tuesday in the Statler.

ODD LOTS: National Airlines is establishing joint cargo rates with American and Capital airlines . . . Eastern States Corp. of Baltimore has filed an SEC registration to sell 860,000 of its million shares of St. Regis Paper Co. common stock . . . Agriculture Department reports that production of shorn wool this year will approximate 215,635,000 pounds, the smallest since records were started in 1909 . . . The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, explaining that most governmental war regulations on business have been lifted, will close its Washington office at the end of this month . . . Publicly reported cash dividends totaled $825,800,000 in June, an increase of 13 per cent over the same month last year, Commerce Department reported.

BENGUET REPORTS: Net income of Benguet Consolidated Mining Co. totaled $451,824 in the first six months this year, equal to 3¾ cents a common share. This was after reserves for depletion and depreciation of $361,993 and after income taxes. It includes the equity interest that Benguet owns in two subsidiaries, the Balatoc Mining Co. and the Heald Lumber Co. Benguet, recently listed and actively traded on the New York Stock Exchange, is a gold, silver and chrome producer in the Phillipines. Its stock is widely held in Washington because of the many Government officials and employes who formerly lived in the Philippines. Lucien H. Mercier, local attorney, is general counsel and a director of Benguet.

EARNINGS: Otis Elevator Co. reported net income of $6,190,387 or $3 a common share for the first six months, against $6,344,109 or $3.07 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings reports:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—A closing rally at the Board of Trade today boosted most wheat deliveries to above yesterday's close after losses of more than a cent had been recorded.

Other futures with the exception of lard and soybeans bounded up to around the previous close in late trading.

In early dealings shorts were not attracted to any extent but toward the finish they started some sustained buying.

At the finish wheat was ⅞ higher to ⅝ lower, corn was unchanged to ¼ lower, oats were ¼ higher to ⅞ lower, rye was unchanged to 1¼ lower, soybeans were 1⅜ to 2¼ lower and lard was 25 to 42 cents a hundredweight lower.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Cotton futures today closed 15 to 60 cents a bale lower under pressure of profit taking and New Orleans selling. Failure of the market to continue the advance, touched off by Monday's lower than expected Government cotton crop forecast, encouraged selling. The market was also depressed by the Senate's action approving the 10 per cent cut in ECA funds which traders felt will be unfavorable on cotton export prospects.

Action For School Compromise Bill Started By Democrats

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A group of House Democrats anxious for action this session on Federal aid to education may settle for a GOP-sponsored compromise bill, Representative Hugo S. Sims (D., S. C.) said last night.

Sims, a member of the House Education and Labor Committee, has been leading a move to obtain 13 signatures of committee members on a petition to force a meeting of the committee to consider the Senate-passed aid to education bill. So far, Sims disclosed, he has been unable to secure sufficient signatures.

Request Ignored

Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) who is opposed to the bill, has ignored requests to call a meeting to consider the Senate bill, calling for an annual expenditure of 300 million dollars.

Lesinski was among the Administration leaders whom President Truman summoned to an apparently fruitless conference at the White House to get action on the measure. Federal aid to education was one of Mr. Truman's major campaign issues last November.

"If the Democratic leadership fails to work out a plan to give members of the House an opportunity to vote on Federal aid to education," Sims said last night, "I believe a group of Democrats will cooperate with the Republicans in getting the Kearns bill to the floor."

Aid Limited

The GOP-backed bill, introduced by Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.), a member of the House Committee on Education and Labor, limits Federal aid to the so-called "needy" States whose expenditures for educational purposes are below the average for the United States.

The Senate-passed bill, which now bears the name of Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), provides a minimum contribution of $5 per child per annum to every State in the Union regardless of need.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) has long been opposed to any Federal aid to education, although he made it clear he would not block a bill providing for it. House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., (R., Mass.) is also opposed.

Prince Georges School to Have New Principal

Appointment of William D. Manifold as principal of Gwynn Park High School was announced yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

Manifold succeeds Michael Hernick, now principal of Greenbelt High. Bartlett Dorr, who has been acting principal, returns to his post as vice principal.

Kalman J. Vozar was named vice principal of Bladensburg High School and Samuel W. Geissenhainer, vice principal of Bladensburg Vocational High School.

The board awarded a contract for new toilets for elementary students at the Surrattsville Consolidated School to Cotterman & Turner of Takoma Park, whose bid of $16,700 was the lowest of four.

School will reopen September 12, the board announced. Teachers will return to their classrooms on September 7 and principals on September 6 to prepare for the opening.

U. S. Crop Report Seen Reflecting Good Weather

A Government report today is expected to give a striking example of what science and good weather can do to produce a farm crop.

Some Agriculture Department officials expect it to forecast a stupendous corn crop of more than 3,750,000,000 bushels. This would exceed last year's record by more than 100 million bushels and the 10-year average by nearly a billion.

A crop of that size would permit a high level of meat, dairy and poultry production into 1951. It also would raise the possibility of Government controls on next year's crop to keep down a surplus.

The corn outlook is the more impressive because the crop is being grown on the third smallest acreage since 1894.

Slavery Seen Facing Japs Held by Reds

Tokyo, (Wednesday) Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Families of Japanese internees and prisoners of war still held in Manchuria and Soviet territories formally accused Communist authorities today of planning to hold 400,000 Japanese in permanent slave labor.

The families, at a mass protest rally, petitioned the Soviet, Chinese Communists, Japanese Government and Allied occupation headquarters for speedy repatriation of the remaining Japanese captives.

The group echoed charges by Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the Soviets and Chinese Communists were deliberately concealing the fate of hundreds of thousands of Japanese still subject to repatriation from the Asiatic mainland.

Sultan's Gift Helps Mother And Daughter

London, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—The Sultan of Johore, one of the richest men in the world, invested $2000 in a mother's happiness today.

The 76-year-old Sultan was recovering in a London nursing home from an operation when he put a storybook ending to Mrs. Meryl MacCarthy's four-year fight for her daughter, Violet Mary.

Violet Mary was only 6 when her parents were divorced in Jamaica four years ago, and when the final decree was entered she was with her father in Trinidad. Mrs. MacArthur was granted custody of the child, but the two remained separated. Legal costs and steamship passages costing $2000 were beyond her reach.

The Sultan read the story in the newspapers and had scouts search London for Mrs. MacArthur.

Today she was taken to his hotel where he handed her a check for the needed money.

'Dedee' Stoops 'Way Below Art

By Richard L. Coe

"DEDEE," the Dupont's film which is pronounced "day-day," reminds me of a story about colorful Florence Reed. (Now don't go and say I said "Dedee" reminded me of Florence Reed; I didn't say that.)

The actress was the guest of several friends at a movie. The theater was crowded and they had to sit apart. The picture had been on about 10 minutes, when the hostess saw Miss Reed rise from her seat and stalk up the aisle. She attracted Florence's attention. In that rafter-shattering whisper that has been the joy of theatergoers, Miss Reed explained her departure in tones that shook the theater.

"This," Florence rumbled, "is not my dish."

Which is the handiest nugget of movie criticism that's ever come my way. "Dedee," for instance, is not my dish.

This is one of those pictures about prostitutes in a seaport. The port is Antwerp, the language generally French, the prostitute is pure inside because Love Has Dawned.

Now there is nothing dearer to the Literary Soul than the campaign, through the years, to show that through Love prostitutes can be gathered back into the fold of the white sheep. It's a theme as old as the Bible, though William Saroyan treats it as though it's his Very Own.

I'm not trying to say that the black sheep can't or shouldn't be redeemed. I'm all for making the world safe from vice squads, but I do think the Literary Set usually looks foolish when it tackles the problem.

For in their artless artyness, they make the assumption that people whom experience has toughened behave like innocents at a crucial moment. In "Dedee," for instance, our heroine is about to have the Life and True Love she has yearned for when she and a realistic-minded protector hand the villain of the piece just the opportunity for revenge they would, under such circumstances, know he would employ to the death. No woman running away from a cowardly beast would give him the opportunity to destroy her one chance of happiness.

But that is just what happens in "Dedee," thereby exposing the complete phoniness of the setup. With the excuse for art gone, the picture itself stands simply as a tasteless sequence of physical brutality and sensuousness. Whether a picture's made in Hollywood or Europe, enveloped in the tinsel of our West Coast or the fogs of the old world, a kick in the stomach, a pummel in the face and rumpled sheets are the same thing: trash.

Granted, the makers of this picture may have intended to tell a moving story about some thoroughly sympathetic people. I think this might have been an impressive picture. But the temptations to lay on the brutality and lust have lured them across the line from sensitivity to unpleasantness.

"DEDEE," Eagle-Lion release produced by Sacha Gordine. Vox films. Screen play by Jacques Sigurd and Yves Allegret from a story by Asheibe. Directed by Allegret. English dialogue titles by Noel Meadow. At the Dupont.

BEVERLEE BOZEMAN, who adapted the dances for Meridian Hill's mini-musical, "On the Town," is back in New York rehearsing to take over the feminine lead opposite Ray Bolger in "Where's Charley." . . . Miss Bozeman replaces the ailing Joan Chandler.

SUSAN PETERS, who has been acting from her wheelchair in films and on the summer stages since her paralysis attack cut short a more active and decidedly promising film career, has been signed to play at Olney . . . Miss Peters will play the Katharine Cornell role in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" the week of August 30 . . . Robert McQueeney will be the Robert Browning . . . This means that the Jose Ferrer "Hamlet," penciled in for that week, has been definitely shelved.

THE NAYLOR'S double Clifton Webb bill—"Sitting Pretty" and "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College"—is tomorrow and Friday.

Houston Policemen Seek College Degrees

Houston, Tex. (U.P.).—Three Houston policemen are graduating with this year's class at the University of Houston.

They will receive bachelor of science degrees in public administration, the first degrees of the kind ever offered at the university.

Patrolman A. Rigmaiden, 36; Sergt. Felix Fabian, 34, and Detective Larry Fultz, 28, are the three who plan to stay in the police department.

All three said the only purpose in going to college was a desire to get ahead.

All in a Day's Work

Boston (U.P.). — War, marriage, two children and night shift duty as a policeman failed to keep Emmett N. Scannel, jr., from earning a bachelor of arts degree at Harvard University.

Neighborhood Movie Directory will be found on page 2B of today's paper.

21 Elected As Alexandria Hospital Board

The Alexandria Hospital Corporation yesterday announced election of a new 21-member board of directors. Approval of a new charter authorizing the expanded board was also announced.

Held over from the old seven-member board were three directors: M. H. Burchell, who was chosen interim chairman; R. Samuel Luckett, and Irving Diener.

Other members named to the new board were: James M. Duncan, jr., O. A. Reardon, Mrs. F. Hamilton Seeley, Albert A. Smoot, William T. Wilkins, Walter C. Davis, C. W. Eichelberger, J. C. Gaines, Mrs. Harold G. Hernly, Irvin M. Hufford, Charles M. Jones, Edward E. Lawler, Edwin Barret, Andrew W. Clarke, Sylvan Cohen, Mrs. Sylvern Laupheimer, Miss Mary Switzer and Marvin L. Wilson.

As part of a move to increase public interest in the hospital, the corporation also raised membership in the corporation from 35 to 100 persons. The action was taken at a general membership meeting held Monday night. A top limit of 200 members is fixed in the new charter.

The charter provides for representation on the hospital board for the first time from Fairfax County.

Texas Girlstown Gets Land Grant

Lubbock, Tex. (U.P.).—Girlstown, modeled on the famed Boystown in Nebraska, has received a gift of $20,000 cashand 1,336 acres of land.

A Lubbock oil man, T. B. Duggan, made the gift. Girlstown, recently established at Buffalo Gap in West Texas by Amelia Anthony, soon will move to its new location, 52 miles southwest of Lubbock.

Girlstown is a home for homeless girls. Miss Anthony expressed regret that its headquartres will have to be moved, but said there was no choice in the matter because of dificulty in obtaining water. The institution had been paying $5 daily to have water hauled.

Navy Will Evict Civilians From Bellevue Homes

Eviction of the 350 civilian families from the Navy-controlled Bellevue housing development will be a gradual process staggered over the next 12 months, the Navy explained yesterday.

The Potomac River Naval Command which took over the 601-unit apartment buildings in February, 1948, notified the civilian families last month that they must move to make room for enlisted personnel assigned to the Naval Gun Factory.

A Navy spokesman explained that the first eviction day will be November 1 when non-veterans earning $5000 or more would be expected to leave.

Present rent schedule at Bellevue range from $35 for one-bedroom apartments to $51 for three-bedroom units.

Bay State Soldier Found Hanged at Walter Reed

An 18-year-old soldier was found hanged with his pajama cord in his bed at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday. He was admitted to the hospital on August 5 as a neuropsychiatric patient from Valley Forge General Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa.

Army authorities said he was vt. John R. Frattus of Cambridge, Mass.

They said Frattus apparently attached the cord to the head of his bed, then to his neck, and slumped down in the bed.

A ward attendant found him 10 minutes after the ward had been checked and all patients were sleeping or quiet. Artificial respiration failed to revive him. An Army board has been appointed to investigate. Army authorities said the youth's mother lives at Cambridge, Mass.

Lesnevich Has Rooter, Charles a Few More

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Aug. 9 (NYHT).—Harry Mendel picked up the phone and said, "Hello, Twentieth Cent—uh, I mean International Boxing Club . . ." Dan Morgan was saying, "Gus will chase that melon-tester right out the ball park, probly over the fence, and that Jake Mintz along with him. Jake won't swoon this time, he'll throw a fit."

Smith

Somebody else said, "I don't know what a melon-tester is, Dan, but I got to agree that until Ezzard proves he's a hell of a fighter, which he may be, you got to give a chance to any belter like Lesnevich that will walk in there and fight . . ."

Nothing was changed except the lettering on the doors and windows, which used to read, "Twentieth Century Sporting Club, Inc." The eve of Ezzard Charles' fist fight with Gus Lesnevich could have been the eve of any other heavyweight championship bout fought around here in years and years. Now, behind the new signs reading, "International Boxing Club, Inc. of New York," the same guys were gathered, the same guys were talking, and saying the same things.

Dan Morgan, as he always does, was picking the long shot and another guy was arguing that Charles was a worthy champion and would prove himself such and somebody else was grumbling, as somebody always does, "Who'd he ever lick?" The question was asked in the same tone about Joe Louis and Jack Dempsey and John L. Sullivan and, no doubt, about Jim Figg and Jack Broughton and Daniel Mendoza.

"HAS IT occurred to you," Harry Markson asked, "how fortunate Louis was by comparison with Charles in having the sort of opposition that was around when he was winning recognition?"

It hadn't occurred to anybody, but it was true. When Louis was making his reputation you could shake former heavyweight champions out of the bushes. A fellow scrambling upward toward the title could, and did, encounter along the way fighters like Jack Sharkey and Max Baer and Primo Carnera and Max Schmeling, all dispossessed proprietors of the championship of the world.

There weren't any former champions whom Ezzard could push over and, by cooling them out, win instant acclaim. There wasn't anything for him to do except beat the best in circulation, and it can't be denied that he has done that.

It can hardly be argued that he didn't qualify fairly when he stopped Jimmy Bivins and Archie Moore and Joe Baksi and Lloyd Marshall and whipped Jersey Joe Walcott. It cannot be said that he hasn't beaten the best now around. It cannot be proved that his opposition wasn't at least as good as the Paolinos and Simmses and Retzlaffs on Louis' record.

"But," somebody said, "could Ezzard have pushed over a Sharkey or a Schmeling or a Baer or a Carnera if he'd had the chance?"

"Who knows?" another guy said. "He's licked everybody they've asked him to lick. A guy's got to be champion in his own time. They can't all murder Willard in Toledo."

Blanchard Can't Play Pro Ball With Charlotte, Air Force Says

By Bus Ham
Post Sports Editor

First Lieut. Felix A. (Doc) Blanchard of the Air Force will learn in a day or two that he will not be permitted to play football this fall for the Charlotte (N. C.) Clippers.

Blanchard is stationed at Shaw Field, Sumter, S. C., and the Charlotte team reportedly has offered the former West Point star $10,000 for the 1949 season.

But the office of W. Stuart Symington, Secretary of the Air Force, said yesterday that Blanchard will not be permitted to play with Charlotte because "all men in the Air Force are barred from such participation by regulations."

Symington's office has received a request for a ruling in Blanchard's case, and the reply will go out in a day or two.

"There is a policy in effect in the Air Force that no officer shall have outside or competing business with his service duties," it was explained at the Secretary's office.

"You can understand that a lot o. guys would want to do things outside, the idea soon would snowball and there inevitably would be conflicts with duty."

"Any time that a person with as big a name as Blanchard becomes involved in something of this nature, it becomes an issue and the existing policy has to be carried out.

"No, there is no possibility of Blanchard playing with Charlotte while on leave. That would be an evasion of the regulations."

The Charlotte Clippers, playing professional and semipro teams, have three major league clubs on their schedule, New York Yankees, Buffalo Bills and Baltimore Colts.

Shaw Field, where Blanchard is stationed, will have a team, and he can play there, but not with the Clippers.

Mangrum's 276 Takes Title; Snead Stroke Back

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum, Tam O'Shanter's favorite son, unwound a pressure-packed one-under-par 35 on the final nine today to rally for a regulation 72 and win the All-American men's pro golf tourney with a 276 total to Sam Snead's 277.

Snead, hot after the first prize of $3,333, preceded Mangrum by 1½ hours and uncorked a brilliant 32-36—68.

The two rivals entered today's windup of the 72-hole Tam meet with Mangrum ahead 204 to 209. On the first nine, Snead closed the gap with his sizzling 32 while Mangrum, the defending All-American champion, zoomed to a one-over-par 37. This left them locked at 63 holes with 241 apiece.

Slams a Birdie 4

Mangrum had to equal par 36 on the final nine to tie. He stayed even with the regulation, then slammed a birdie 4 on the 515-yard fifteenth by reaching the green in two shots and taking two putts from 12 feet. He matched par the last three holes to hit the jackpot.

Snead three-putted the eighteenth from 10 feet, missing a three-footer on his second try, in a blow-up that eventually cost him at least a deadlock.

In contrast to Snead's missed three-footer on the last hole, Mangrum dropped his for a par 4 and the victory from the same distance. His second shot was feet past the cup. Then his first putt was three feet long. But he rammed it in with $1000 riding on it. Snead's second-place money is $2333.

Following Mangrum and Snead were Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., and Clay Heafner, of Charlotte, N. C. Harper closed with a 67 over the heavy-travelled par 36-36—72 Tam layout which stretches 6915 yards. Heafner authored 37,35—72. Both tied at 280.

While the crowd of 7000 paid most attention to the pros, champions also were crowned in the All-American women's open and men's amateur rings.

Louise Suggs, of Carrollton, Ga., breezed to the women's crown and $1200 first award with a final even par of 76 for a 303. Defending women's titlist Babe Zaharias of Denver, Colo., took second and $650 with 75 for 307.

Wins Amateur Honors

Third place, and amateur honors, went to 19-year-old Alice Bauer of Los Angeles with 77 for 312. Two pros followed. Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., faded to 81 for 313 for a $350 purse, and Patty Berg of Minneapolis needed 75 for 315 for $225.

Frank Stranahan defended his amateur men's title with a final 69 and a 72-hole tally of 286. Julius Boros, of West Hartford, Conn., who slammed 67-69 on his first two rounds, closed with a 74 for 288 and second place. Wilford Wehrle of French Lick, Ind., took third with 71 for 290. Chicago's Pick Wagner needed 77 for 291 and fourth place.

Leading pro scorers, winnings:

Lloyd Mangrum, Tam O'Shanter, 64, 70, 70, 72—276 ($3333).
Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., 67, 68, 74, 68—277 ($2333).

This Is Ed Berrang

By Bill Burnett

OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE, Calif., Aug. 9.—Tender skin and a slight case of too much talent are the twin bugaboos of Ed Berrang, only rookie end of the Washington Redskins.

Berrang

The skin Berrang can handle. He simply coast all his exposed parts with cold cream, shutting out the California sun, which leaves his unprotected skin a flaming red.

His talent, however, may be his downfall. It might rob him of a job, and nobody has tried harder to land a job since depression days.

Berrang's talent trouble stems from his brilliant wing play at Villanova. He played on both offense and defense in all of the Wildcats' games in 1947 and 1948. He caught 15 passes last season, three for touchdowns, and was selected on Collier's All-East eleven.

In the Harbor bowl game at San Diego the 210-pound wingman capped his collegiate career by leading Villanova to an easy victory over Nevada. Berrang, it was reported, "owned" Nevada's dazzling Stan Heath from start to finish.

The Redskins picked Berrang No. 5 in the draft on the recommendation of Coach Paul Bryant of Kentucky, who'd seen Berrang practically wreck Bryant's own Kentucky club.

Then came an invitation to play with the eastern all-stars against the New York Giants in the September 1 charity game in New York. Berrang had to accept or be ruled out of all the Redskins five exhibition games. He leaves Friday and can't return to his pro club until after its first two exhibitions—against the Los Angeles Rams on August 26 and against the Detroit Lions in Denver on August 30.

Meanwhile, the other six ends, all seasoned players with the Redskins, can be expected to extend themselves trying to clinch the six flank jobs available while Berrang is away.

You might say the native Pennsylvanian with the Boston accent gets a bad break by being so good.

'Skins Increase Practice Time

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 9.—The Washington Redskins' fall training sessions were lengthened and speeded up today as Head Coach Billick Whelchel bore down for the approaching National Football League season.

Dowda

Both morning and afternoon workouts were extended by 15 minutes, giving the club a total of 4½ hours on the field, plus 1½ hours of skull drill in the evenings.

The tonsils of Halfback Eddie Saenz were removed by Hollywood's Dr. Joseph B. Stevens at St. Vincent's Hospital today . . . the fleet runner will recuperate briefly at his Santa Monica home and return to the fold Friday . . . probably the hardest workouts of their careers were taken by Halfbacks Brian Bell and Howard Hartley, the only halfbacks in running condition as Dan Sandifer nursed a pulled muscle and Harry Dowda sported blisters on his feet . . . Coach Whelchel is new to the T-formation but he understands its own main requisites—speed and deception . . . the faking is stressed so strongly that the popular cry is "Who's got the ball?" . . . it would be nice if the Redskins could have it a few times during the season.—BILL BURNETT.

Cards Match Bums, Beating Cincy, 4 to 1

St. Louis, Aug. 9 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals kept pace with the Brooklyn Dodgers in the tight National League race by downing the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 1, tonight. Harry Brecheen allowed seven hits and no walks for his ninth victory of the year.

Johnny Vander Meer was the victim, allowing seven of the 10 hits the Redbirds made. Previously Vander Meer had two shutout games against the Cardinals this season for two of his three victories. He was credited with his seventh loss tonight.

Successive doubles in the third inning by Nippy Jones and Enos Slaughter gave St. Louis its first run. The Cards added another in the fourth when Brecheen slammed out a triple and scored on Chuck Diering's single.

The Reds' lone run came in the sixth when Vander Meer opened with a single. With two out Jones fumbled Grady Hatton's grounder, Vander Meer going to third. Walker Cooper Singled the Reds' pitcher home.

Brecheen had some trouble in the seventh, but with the bases loaded Red Schoendienst tagged Pinchrunner Howard Fox, then threw to first to complete a double play and end the inning without a Cincinnati run.

The Cards gave the 13,759 fans two extra runs in the seventh. Eddie Erautt, who relieved Vander Meer that inning, walked three of the first four men to face him. Marty Marion then popped a single into left field, scoring two.

They're Still Our Nats

By Herb Heft

Dear Bus:

WILDWOOD, N. J., Aug. 9.—We only have a few more days before our vacation ends, so Shirley (the little wife) and I hiked down the long and busy boardwalk here today. The Nats would have been proud of me, too.

I stopped by one of these baseball throwing concessions and splurged 40 cents worth. Did okay, too. Knocked the six bottles down all four times, and walked off with a kewpie doll. I had real speed and form. Shirley even suggested that I might be the answer to Joe Kuhel's relief pitching problem. She cited the similarity between Grove and me—we're both left-handers.

Do me a favor, will you, Bus? Drop by the mail room and thank the boys for getting The Washington Post up here so faithfully. It arrives here on the same day that you see it in Washington.

I see where Lloyd Hittle pitched a dilly the other day, beating the White Sox, 1-0. That news is certainly encouraging. He and the sensational Dick Weik give us two very promising young pitchers, and with such proven but still youthful veterans as Sid Hudson, Ray Scarborough, Paul Calvert and Mickey Harris, should bring us a lot of victories before this year is over.

NOTICE ALSO WHERE Sherry Robertson thumped Randy Gumpert of Chicago for a triple and two singles the other day. He's still climbing, that boy. Griff must be very proud of him.

Are you going out to the game Wednesday night? Understand that it's Eddie Robinson night. That's a good idea even if some Baltimoreans did think it up. Robbie deserves a special night. Before the season's over, he may prove himself the greatest home-run slugger in the Nats' history.

He needs only nine more to reach the record of 22 in one season. That would put him ahead of such stars as Goose Goslin, Ed Delehanty, Joe Cronin, Heinie Manush, Al Simmons, Zeke Bonura and Stan Spence.

Eddie's the only man in the league who has homered in every park this year, so I guess you'd have to place him ahead of Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio and Eddie Joost.

Gotta go now, the beach beckons though I'm already so tan you might mistake me for one of the new Cubans. See you Monday. Regards to my Nats as ever.

Macks Walk To 8-3 Win Over Nats

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

If the Philadelphia Athletics had made every base on balls they got count for a run, they would have scored at least 15 times against the Nats last night.

Fortunately, they didn't, but they used enough of them plus eight hits to rack up an 8-3 victory and extend their latest winning streak to four straight.

Benefiting from the generosity of two of the three pitchers the Nats trotted out, the Mackmen had little trouble in snapping the Nats' one-game string and presenting Carl Scheib with his seventh decision.

Scheib had a shutout until the ninth when the Nats bunched four of their nine hits to score all of their runs.

Dick Weik, something of a sensation the last ten days in two losing efforts, wasn't anywhere near that last night as he lost again—for the fifth time.

The big righthander from Iowa's tall corn country walked 10 and gave up seven runs and six hits before he was yanked in the fifth inning.

With a crowd of 8946 out to cheer him on, Weik was a bit of a disappointment. He walked eight in the first two innings, forcing over the first two Macks' runs in the second.

He found his control in the next two innings and the A's immediately pounded him for six hits and four more runs.

Enrique Gonzales, one of the pitching members of the Nats' fast-growing Cuban colony, bailed out Weik in the fifth and pitched hitless, runless ball for three innings.

Against the fast-balling Scheib, however, the Nats couldn't do a thing about overcoming the 7-0 deficit Weik had pitched them into and easily went down to their twenty-third licking in the last 26 games.

Weik loaded the bases on walks with two away in the first, but got out of it by fanning Pete Suder to retire the side. Weik also fanned Sam Chapman with the bases loaded in the second inning to retire the side, but it came too late as he had already walked in two runs.

Pete Suder's double with two aboard made it 6-0 in the third and Eddie Joost's triple and Wally Moses' fly to center upped the Mack margin to 7-0 in the next inning.

Suder's triple also knocked out Weik and Gonzales came in to halt the A's until the eighth when two more hits—these off Dick Welteroth—brought them their eighth and final run.

The 15 walks the three Nats' pitchers yielded—10 by Weik, 2 by Gonzales and three by Welteroth—were three shy of tieing a major league mark for a nine-inning game.

Singles by Sam Dente and Jake Early and Clyde Vollmer's pinch double—a ball which missed by inches going into the left field stand—brought in the first Nat run in the ninth. Gil Coan doubled in the final two.

IN SHORT—Gonzales kept Coan busy during his three-inning stint. The Nats' centerfielder made six of the eight putouts while the Cuban toiled. . . . A group of Baltimore fans will honor Eddie Robinson tonight, showering him with gifts in ceremonies at home plate. Robbie played in Baltimore before joining Cleveland and makes his winter home there. . . . Despite his ill-luck last night, Manager Joe Kuhel thinks Weik will be "the best pitcher in the American League in another season." . . . Lefthander Alex Kellner makes his third bid to win his fifteenth game tonight. For the Nats, it's Sid Hudson trying for his seventh success. . . .

Bangaway, 3 to 1 Choice, Placed 18th

By Ray Ayres

Goshep, N. Y., Aug. 9 (U.P.).—The "cradle of trotting" rocked noisily tonight as grizzled horsemen, weather-beaten farmers and city slickers argued over favored Bangaway's chances in the Hambletonian Stakes at Good Time Park tomorrow considering that he drew the worst post position in the field.

A total of 18 three-year-old trotters were entered for the twenty-fourth running of the sulky set's classic, the second largest field in the history of the stake, and C. M. Saunders' colt drew the outside post. But even though he will start on the outside of the second row of horses to line up behind the starting gate for the first heat at 3 p. m. (EDT), most of them thought he was horse enough to win.

Tabbed as a wide open affair even before the horses were officially entered this morning, the "luck of the draw" made it anybody's horserace with A. L. Derby's highly rated Martha Doyle given the best chance to upset the favorite. For while Bangaway drew the No. 18 post, Martha Doyle got the coveted rail position and will have clear sailing in the race to the first turn while Bangaway will have to plow through the bulky field to get a shot at the front end.

Bangaway's driver, Ralph Baldwin, in order to win the important first heat will have to steer the son of Volomite past the entire field.

D. C. Netmen Eliminated

Newport, R. I., Aug. 9.—Two Washington, D. C., representatives suffered doubles defeats in second round play today in the Newport Casino's thirtieth invitation tourney.

Jim Thackera, playing with Tom Bonner, Jackson, Miss., unsuccessfully bumped up against Frankie Parker and Pancho Gonzales and that top-seeded duo won 6—3, 6—1.

Gil Bogley, teaming with Jerry DeWitts, Oakland, Calif., lost to Bill Talbert and Sid Schwartz, after hard battles, 13—11 and 9—7.

Charlie Harris, Corpus Christi, Tex., provided the only upset in early third-round singles matches, defeating ninth-seeded Jack Tuero, New Orleans, 6—3, 6—4.

Second-seeded Gardner Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla.; third-seeded Vic Seixas, Philadelphia, and fourth-seeded Earl Cochell, San Francisco, advanced with little trouble.

Reds Quell Uprising in Slovak Town

Prague, Aug. 9 (AP).—Residents of a mountain town in Catholic Slovakia, armed with scythes and flails, recently revolted against the Communists and set up their own local government, it was disclosed today.

Svet Prace, weekly magazine of the Czech Communist Party, said the uprising occurred at Strecno, in northwestern Slovakia, where fighting between Catholic villagers and Communist-controlled police flared six weeks ago.

The magazine said villagers led by a group of peasant women beat up the chairman of the Communist-controlled local executive board while defending their parish priest from threatened arrest.

Citizens Appoint Council

Then, the magazine added, the citizens of Strecno appointed an "illegal" council of their own to replace the local government "after things were changed."

"These people did not seem to be certain whether a new government had already been proclaimed, but they were ready for it," Svet Prace said. "Thereupon they began attacking every auto which passed through the village."

This appeared to indicate the people of Strecno thought a new government was to be proclaimed for all Czechoslovakia and that they were taking part in a widespread revolt, said Svet Prace.

The Communist publication said two persons were wounded and "several" arrested when Czech police quelled the uprising. It gave no exact date for the clash but said the offending village had its electric power shut off for several weeks, apparently as punishment.

Vatican Tells of Flare-Ups

(Vatican sources reported last week that new flare-ups had occurred in strongly Catholic Slovakia.)

Svet Prace described the Strecno incident as a "revolution" and said state security police supported by workers' militia units were called to disarm the peasants.

The magazine said the Strecno priest had not been arrested, and added:

"Those villages where such incidents concerning the church have occurred are now in disgrace and are being laughed at. Priests continue holding services and thousands of vacationists spent their holidays in these 'focal points of revolution.'"

Europe's First Parliament Opens Today

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Europe's first experimental parliament will open officially Wednesday in the big marble-pillared hall of the University of Strasbourg, with Britain's wartime Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, present.

Churchill, for years a proponent of a United States of Europe, arrived here tonight. The Committee of Foreign Ministers, the executive body of the Council of Europe, started meeting yesterday.

The 12 European foreign ministers agreed today on a limited agenda, but crushed an effort by the small nations for a bigger voice in running the new organization.

The agenda, which bore little resemblance to an actual parliamentary calendar, was as follows:

1. The role the Council of Europe can play in the economic field.
2. The council's role in social security programs.
3. Means for developing cultural relations between the 12 member nations.

A more ambitious agenda, suggested by the smaller nations, and an Irish-Swedish proposal to make it easier for the little countries to get questions on the agenda were defeated overwhelmingly.

Probably the biggest surprise of the committee session today was Britain's failure to get the question of human rights on the assembly's agenda. Only Ireland, Denmark and Norway supported Britain and the vote was seven to four against the proposal.

Most of the opposition came from French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, who argued that the United Nations already had a human rights commission and that most of the European council members already have signed its conventions.

Woman Arrested As Liaison Agent For Counterfeiters

New York, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—A 52-year-old grandmother, said to be the liaison agent for a million-dollar counterfeit ring working out of New York, surrendered to Federal authorities today.

After her surrender, Mrs. Beatrice Resch engaged in a hair-pulling match in the United States attorney's office with another woman who allegedly informed on her. Secret Service agents had to pull Mrs. Resch away from Lillian Mizell, 37-year-old plump brunette, who is serving a three-year jail sentence for belonging to the counterfeit ring.

Mrs. Resch was held in $5000 bail on a charge of conspiracy to violate counterfeit laws.

The United States Attorney's office charged she was sent to Connecticut by leaders of the New York gang to offer "perfect" money from new plates if the Connecticut ring would buy $50,000 worth.

Hawaii Dock Job Applicants Sign Up as Seizure Nears

Honolulu, Aug. 9 (AP).—Applicants began signing up today to work Hawaii's strikebound docks in expectation of an imminent order from Gov. Ingram M. Stainback seizing struck stevedoring companies.

Stainback's order was expected momentarily on this 101st day of the paralyzing waterfront walkout.

Ben F. Rush, harbor board manager who will run the docks for the territorial government, predicted there would be "more than enough applicants" for the 1500 longshoremen's jobs.

About 300 men were lined up at the hiring office. They were signing non-Communist oaths and were taking physical examinations.

Rush said he could not yet tell whether any members of the striking CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union were among the applicants.

Henry Schmidt, an ILWU leader from San Francisco, stood watch outside the hiring office. Union leaders have declared their men will not work for the Government, although they are eligible under the dock seizure law passed last week by the territorial legislature.

Common-Law Husband Gives Up In Woman's Death

Eddie Poe, 31, yesterday was ordered held by a coroner's jury for the grand jury in the fatal beating of Mrs. Arethea Flowers, 30.

Mrs. Flowers was found beaten to death in her bed at 1742 8th st. nw. Sunday morning by Dr. Raymond A. Davis, 1821 8th st. nw., who had been summoned by an unidentified phoner.

Poe, said by police to be the common-law husband of Mrs. Flowers, gave himself up to police yesterday in the office of his attorney, James J. Laughlin. Poe refused to talk to reporters.

Pastor Tells Weird Story of 'Haunted' Boy

exhausted with mopping up the squashings. The "manifestations" happened always in the boy's presence.

The family called in exterminators, but no rodents could be found.

The neighbors laughed it off, and invited the family to stay with them one night. Some of the manifestations were repeated in the neighbor's house, and before their eyes.

The minister, intensely skeptical, asked that the boy be permitted to stay with him and his wife one night.

On the night of February 17, from 9:20 p. m. to 9:20 a. m., the minister was with the boy. At 10 p. m. they went to bed, sleeping in twin beds in the same room.

At 10:10 p. m. there was a "tremendous vibration" from the boy's bed, accompanied by the sound of scratchings from the wall. The minister switched on the light. He got up and put the boy in a large, heavy armchair, with the boy's feet on the chair and his knees drawn under his chin. The boy was wrapped up in a blanket, his hands around his knees.

Suddenly, the minister said, the chair moved three inches until it was against the wall. Then, before his amazed eyes, the heavy chair started tilting over. The boy's hands had not moved, nor his body. Only his voice said: "The chair's going over with me, pastor."

And go over the chair did, said the minister, toppling the boy onto the floor.

Later the minister attempted to overturn the chair while sitting in it himself. He was unable to do so when in the same position as the boy, he said, and could only tilt the chair by bracing his feet on the floor and swinging his weight heavily to one side—when it happened with the boy, he said, the boy had not moved.

The boy was unable to sleep because of the heavy vibrations whenever he lay on the bed, so the minister placed a blanket and pillow on the floor, had the boy lie down, and covered him with another blanket.

Presently the boy fell asleep. The minister, with the lights on, got into his own bed.

As he watched, the bedding and the boy, slowly, very slowly, with measured movements, began to slide across the floor and under the two beds. It kept sliding until the boy's head hit against a bed, waking him.

All the time, said the clergyman, the boy's hand had been outside the bedding, on the pillow, and his body had remained perfectly straight under the blanket, so that there could have been no "crawling."

The pallet was made again and this time the boy, blankets and all made a half circle on the floor first—then again slid under the bed.

Again the boy's hands were outside the bedding, his body was rigid, and there was no wrinkling of the blankets.

"What queered me," said the minister, laughing as he related this to his small, rapt audience last night at the Mount Pleasant Public Library, "was tha the whole thing moved as a unit. I said, 'Now, look, this is enough of this . . .'"

The minister called in the family doctor. "He looked at me as if he wanted to send me away somewhere." The doctor prescribed barbitol for the whole family.

But the manifestations continued until the last two months.

Senate Takes Action On a Dozen Federal Employe Measures

The Senate yesterday acted on a dozen Federal worker bills.

It passed the Humphrey bill to give what amounts to absolute job preference to veterans who have disabilities of 60 or more per cent.

An objection by Senator Schoeppel (R., Kan.) sidetracked the Langer-Klein bill to place non-veterans with 15 or more years of service on an equal footing with veterans during lay-offs.

Also, objections by Senator Hendrickson (R., N. J.) caused the Senate to pass over the Long bill to give the average classified employe a $125 increase, and the House-approved Lesinski bill to provide more liberal benefits to employes who are killed or injured in the line of duty.

Rural mail carriers would get an allowance of 9 cents a mile, or $3.50 a day, under another bill approved by the Senate. A bill to give postal employes credit toward promotions for time served in the military forces was approved.

Also approved were bills: To allow employes under 55 and having 25 or more years of service to retire on reduced annuities if they were laid off as far back as July 1, 1945; to permit law enforcement officers to use any five years of their service in computing their pensions; to direct the Public Health Service to give its commissioned officers annual and sick leave with pay, and to allow Civil Aeronautics Administration to send 25 technical people to school for advanced training annually.

CENSUS: Philip M. Hauser, an able administrator, yesterday was moved up to acting director of the Census Bureau to replace J. C. Capt, who retired because of disability after a long illness. Hauser may be in the post indefinitely.

Hauser, a former Census official, is on leave as associate dean of the University of Chicago's Division of Social Sciences. The Senate recently confirmed him to a second term as United States representative on the U. N. population commission.

TRANSFER: Meantime, Census officials are moving ahead on an Administration-indorsed plan to decentralize its work on next year's big general census.

As first revealed here, up to 10,000 new census jobs, originally planned for this city, now are slated to be moved to a distressed economic center, or centers. Various decentralization proposals are reported to be in the "study" stage by top officials.

A plan reported to be gaining favor would bring about a wider transfer of Census work than had been thought possible. It suggests that the editing and coding of census questionaires be conducted in the various regions. If approved, this would mean from 6000 to 7000 jobs would be scattered among 100 cities the country-over, and a headquarters staff would be set up, possibly in a New England city, to direct and process the work. In that event, the headquarters staff would have between 2500 and 3000 employes.

Despite the fact that a relatively small number of census employes here would be transferred to the distressed economic center, or centers, to supervise the work, the staff here would be increased in any event. It wouldn't be possible to move the enormous tabulating machines and other such equipment. The 1950 census will be a major Government peacetime operation that will require the services of 175,000 temporary employes.

The one big hitch in transferring work from this city is the cost factor. It would be somewhat cheaper to do the work here as planned.

COMMERCE: George Vietheer has been given a leave of absence by the Commerce Department to make a study of civilian employes in the Canal Zone for the Defense Department. He's Commerce's assistant personnel officer . . . NFFE: The independent National Federation of Federal Employes has chartered a new local at Adak, which is more than 1200 miles off the Alaskan mainland in the Aleutian Islands . . . CIVIL SERVICE: Robert Ramspeck, former chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, says he isn't interested in the chairmanship of the Civil Service Commission. He'd be a good selection.

Ancell Named City Manager Of Alexandria; Salary $15,000

GUY W. ANCELL

Guy W. Ancell, city manager of Portsmouth, Va., was chosen city manager of Alexandria last night by a 5-to-2 vote of the City Council.

The new manager succeeds Nicholas A. Colasanto, who was ousted by the council by a 4-to-3 vote last March, and Robert S. Marshall, director of the Alexandria Housing and Redevelopment Authority, who has been holding the post temporarily until a permanent manager was named.

Ancell, who has been manager of four other Virginia communities beside Portsmouth in the past 15 years, will take office September 15, at a salary of $15,000 a year. He now receives $12,000, Alexandria Council members said.

His appointment was recommended by a council special committee headed by R. Samuel Luckett.

Before mentioning Ancell's name, Luckett said the committee had screened 30 persons who applied for the city manager job, had interviewed no one but applicants, finally narrowing the field to three candidates, from among whom Ancell was chosen.

He said the committee tried to be "fair and square" and had not tried to "push anything down anyone's throat."

This brought a response from Councilman Roy Bragg that the appointment was "rammed down our throats." He and Councilman LeRoy S. Benheim voted against it.

Benheim charged Ancell was "too active" in the discharge of Colasanto and in Virginia State politics. He said that as far back as last March, a northern Virginia daily paper had predicted the Portsmouth manager's appointment to the Alexandria post.

Before becoming Portsmouth manager, Ancell served two years as town manager of Orange, Va.; 10 years as city manager of Hopewell, Va.; 15 months as city manager of Covington, Va.; and two years as city manager of Staunton, Va.

A native of Hanover Court House, Va., he is 51 and married, but has no children. He is a former president of the Virginia unit of the International City Managers Association.

In other actions last night, the council:

1. Approved a resolution by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley calling for investigation of homes in the city using privies where city sewer services are available.

2. Instructed the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority to ask a $120,000 loan from the Public Housing Authority for surveys and planning for 400 low-rent, public housing dwelling units in the city.

Witness, 19, Changes Story, Denies Seeing ABC Violations

Charging that she signed a statement about alleged liquor law violations in fear of policewomen, a 19-year-old girl witness before an ABC board hearing yesterday changed her story completely and denied seeing the violations.

Peggy Lucas

She is Margaret Jane "Peggy" Lucas, 3942 C st. se. She was testifying in a hearing on charges that the Five Points Tavern, owned by Elmer R. Mangum, jr., at 1201 K st. ne., sold beer to two 17-year-old girls on June 1.

Testimony of Miss Lucas and the two 17-year-olds showed that they and two adults were at a table together in the place on that date. The juvenile girls testified they were served beer.

At Miss Lucas' denial of her previous signed statement corroborating the alleged violation, Robert Wise, assistant corporation counsel, claimed surprise and cross-examined her.

She testified that previously, she and another girl were out late and afraid to go home. She telephoned Police Women's Bureau, she said, and she was taken there. While there, she testified, a matron slapped her, knocked her down, kicked her and pulled her hair.

Her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Lucas, who came to the Women's Bureau for her, testified the girl told her of the matron's alleged acts but she made no complaint at the time.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau, in a statement later denied any mistreatment of Miss Lucas occurred.

At the ABC hearing, Mrs. Francis K. Baldwin, a waitress at the Five Points Tavern, said the two 17-year-old girls had been in the place several times and drank soda. She said that on the occasion mentioned in the charges, they became noisy and she refused to serve them anything.

Mangum, the proprietor, said he was not in the place at the time, but asserted that the two 17-year-old girls had been there other times, were known, and not served beer.

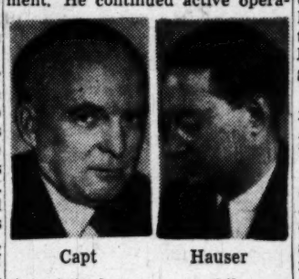
The two adults alleged to have been at the table at the time of the offense charged were not called as witnesses. The ABC board took the case under advisement.

Capt Retires as Census Head; Hauser Named Acting Director

James C. Capt, 61, retired yesterday as director of the Census Bureau, and Philip M. Hauser was named acting director.

Capt retired because of "prolonged illness," Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer announced. He had been director since 1941.

About three months ago Capt underwent the first of three operations for a sciatic nerve involvement. He continued active operation of the bureau meanwhile, conferring with assistants at home and in the hospital.



Capt Hauser

Capt joined the bureau in 1939 as confidential assistant to the director when he helped assemble the staff of 120,000 field workers for the 1940 census.

President Roosevelt appointed him as head of the bureau in 1941.

Capt entered Government service as one of the early active New Deal workers. When the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was established in 1933, he joined its staff in Texas, and in 1934 became an executive officer on Harry Hopkins' staff in Washington. He later joined the Works Progress Administration, before going over to the Census Bureau.

A native of Texas, Capt is married, and lives at the Westchester Apartments. He has two daughters by a previous marriage.

His successor is recognized as one of the Nation's top statisticians. Hauser, 39, and a native of Chicago, has been in census work since 1930, beginning as an enumerator and special assistant to the supervisor of the decennial census. In 1938, he was appointed assistant chief statistician of the population division, and from 1942 served first as assistant to the director, and later as deputy director.

Two Steps Taken to Speed Up Arlington School Construction

The Arlington County School Board last night took two steps to hasten construction of a proposed new 1000-pupil junior high school.

The board met at its headquarters, 2732 Wilson blvd., Arlington.

The board (1) let a contract for grading and otherwise improving the 8-acre site on Vacation lane between N. Military rd. and Lorcom lane, and (2) authorized sale of $2,500,000 of school construction bonds to finance the building of the junior high and other proposed schools.

The grading contract was awarded to Payne & Oliver, Inc., of Fairfax County, who submitted the low bid of $49,600.

The contract calls for levelling the lot, grading the parking area, playing field and access roads, removal of excess trees, partial excavation for the building and the installation of 1200 feet of storm sewer lines and 600 feet of smaller sewer lines.

The work is to be completed within 60 days, and the board expressed the hope the building contract can be let by the end of October.

The bond issue is the first part of the $4,750,000 authorized by a county-wide referendum last November.

The board, in other action, authorized School Superintendent William A. Early to borrow up to a million dollars in short-term loans to finance school operating expenses pending collection of tax moneys and to employ a Chicago research concern to study and make recommendations for a retirement system for school maintenance and custodial employes. These employes are the only ones in the school system not now covered by a pension plan.

McKinley Pool Offer Not Taken, Says Wender

Recreation Board Ready to Operate It on Basis of Nonsegregation

The District Recreation Board has offered to run the McKinley swimming pool on a nonsegregated basis but the proposal has not been accepted by the Interior Department.

The offer, reported at a board meeting yesterday, was made last Friday, according to Board Chairman Harry S. Wender. He said his committee offered to run both Francis and Bannecker pools, heretofore open to Negroes, on a nonsegregated basis as well.

But the District agency has refused Interior Secretary J. A. Krug's request that it operate Anacostia pool, closed since June 29, on a nonsegregated basis. There were indications last night the Federal agency itself may reopen Anacostia on a nonsegregated basis. It already has been refilled with water.

An Interior spokesman said an announcement would be made in advance if the department does decide to reopen the pool. It was closed by Krug's order after racial clashes there.

The Recreation Board gave Wender and the two other members of its negotiating committee a vote of confidence yesterday, in effect approving the McKinley offer. The committee will try again to reach some agreement with Interior on the pool problem as well as a general agreement for the transfer to the District agency of other Interior-held play facilities in Washington.

Wender said he had made the McKinley suggestion, later concurred in by James E. Schwab, board member, and Recreation Superintendent Milo F. Christiansen, other negotiators. He said the board would run the pool, formerly used only by white swimmers, "on a truly interracial basis" if Krug accepted the offer.

50 Park Police Hear How to Avert Riots

The ability of the policeman, by using proper techniques, to keep minor racial disturbances from flaming into big ones was emphasized here yesterday to 50 park police by an expert in race relations.

Opening a series of lectures on methods of combatting racial tensions, Dr. Joseph D. Lohman, lecturer in sociology at the University of Chicago, detailed the policeman's responsibility in "unbiased enforcement" of the law.

He also discussed some of the causes of racial tensions, such as housing-congested areas.

The lectures, being given to the policemen in the Interior Department Auditorium, will continue through Thursday or Friday. Two sessions are scheduled daily, from about 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. and 1 to 3 p. m. In addition to the park police, two representatives of the Metropolitan Police Department sat in on yesterday's sessions.

Nurses Short, Hospital Bans Some Surgery

Arlington Hospital will take no more "elective" surgery cases until its shortage of operating room nurses is eased, John J. Anderson, director, announced yesterday.

The hospital now has only three nurses, specially trained for operating room duty, instead of its normal quota of eight, Anderson said.

The order, effective yesterday, means that such non-emergency operations such as tonsilectomies and hernia cases must be postponed.

The order will not affect emergency surgical cases, Anderson emphasized.

The director blamed a "seasonal shortage" for the depleted operating room nursing staff, which has shrunk to three in the past month. He believed the shortage would be eased by September.

Hazard Hints

3. Never risk infection. No matter how small a wound may be, it's a gateway for a parade of thousands of germs.

Be certain not to touch the wound with anything that you are not sure is sterile. Apply a dressing of sterile gauze directly over the wound, and cover that with a bandage or tape.

'Our Business,' School Board Tells Council

Price and location of school property bought by the Montgomery County Board of Education are "not the business" of the County Council, James W. Gill, school board vice president, declared yesterday.

Gill said that under the law, "it's not their business where we buy, what we buy, or what type of building we put up."

His broadside was directed principally at Councilman P. G. Ligon, who disagreed recently with the board in its choice of a seven-acre lot to add to the site of the present Potomac Elementary School.

After a tour of the property several weeks ago, Ligon said he thought the site was too close to the highway for safety, and too expensive.

He recommended purchase of land back of the school.

The board asked School Superintendent Dr. Edwin W. Broome to consult with Ligon and, following the conference, file condemnation proceedings against the lot the board wants.

Broome yesterday was authorized to set up a school for child cerebral palsy cases in the Silver Spring Intermediate School at Philadelphia and Chicago aves.

Thief Caught

War Bonds Held for Ransom

Detective R. E. Sisk of the Tenth Precinct didn't need to read FBI stories or mystery magazines to know how to operate in the case of the "kidnapped" war bonds.

Instead, he concealed himself yesterday and grabbed the 17-year-old "bondnapper" right by the seat of the pants when the youth bent over to pick up $100 in "ransom."

A week ago, Miss Margaret Mitchell, who occupies a fourth floor apartment at 1445 Ogden st. nw., reported her apartment was looted of $600 in war bonds. The same day, Miss Ruth Higgins, same address and same floor, told police a thief took a quantity of sentimentally valued silverware and jewelry from her apartment.

Monday, Miss Mitchell told Detective Sisk she received a typewritten, unsigned note telling her that the writer had "found" her war bonds. If she wanted them back, the note said, she was to place $100 in the incinerator closet on the fourth floor of the apartment building.

Yesterday, the $100 wasn't waiting, but Detective Sisk was. When the youth bent over the floor of the incinerator closet, Sisk grabbed the seat of his pants. The officer said the bonds, the silverware, and the typewriter on which the note was written, were in the boy's home. The youth is charged with two counts of housebreaking and one for grand larceny, and held at the District Receiving Home for juvenile authorities.

Bronze Stars Due 3 District Guard Members Today

Three Washington young men, members of the District National Guard and overseas war veterans, will be honored today.

Their unit, the 163d Military Police Battalion, now in summer field training at Fort Meade, will hold a special retreat parade there for them at 4 p. m.

They will be called "front and center" to have pinned on them Bronze Stars for overseas gallantry.

The three are Sergt. Angelo R. Munari, 1625 W st. se., veteran of the 101st Airborne Division in the Battle of the Bulge; Corpl. Edward Kemp, 4715 Piney Branch rd nw., veteran of service with the Twenty-fourth Division in the Pacific, and Lieut. Frank Hardie, 6535 Broad st. nw., veteran of service with the Thirty-sixth Division in Italy.

Beetle Diet

Taft Acts To Reprieve Starlings

Concern over the Japanese beetle threat in the Washington area yesterday led Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) to block a bill aimed at liquidating District starlings.

Taft asked what would be done about Japanese beetles if their enemy, the starling, were removed from the local scene.

Senator Clinton Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture, teamed up with Taft by declaring that the scarcity of Japanese beetles here is largely due to the abundance of starlings.

Three District measures were approved by the Senate during its call of the calendar, and were sent to the House. They would:

1. Clear the way for District public school teachers to participate in an international exchange teaching program.

2. Exempt the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America from paying District property taxes on its headquarters here.

3. Increase the number of boilers subject to District inspection.

The Senate also approved and sent to the White House a bill to transfer the Suitland Parkway, running from the District to Andrews Field, to the National Park Service. The service has operated it under a War Assets permit since the Army declared it surplus.

Also approved was a bill to set up the Supreme Court Building Guard force as a police unit. Its members now hold special commissions from the District commissioners. The bill goes to the White House.

The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill to authorize a $4,475,000 radio laboratory building for the National Bureau of Standards. The site has not been chosen, but will probably be outside Washington.

Jap Beetles Waning, Experts Declare

Rose bush fanciers may not believe it, but Government entomologists yesterday insisted that Japanese beetles have caused far less damage to the area's greenery than last year.

And the bug experts believe they have the pesky insects on the run from here on.

Both Horace V. Wester, plant pathologist of the National Capital Park Service, and the University of Maryland entomology department attribute the decline to the increasing use of DDT spraying and the milky spore which kills the beetles.

Wester reported yesterday that Jap beetles have paid little attention to their "preferred hosts," the rose family, in the city's park this year.

Arlington's School Board Head Quizzed

The Arlington Fact Finders Council yesterday made public a detailed list of 16 questions which it has submitted to County School Board Chairman Barnard Joy, who previously had offered to answer charges made by the group.

The Fact Finders Council, which opposed the county's recent school bond issue, has criticized the school board because, it charges, "in 19 months not one permanent classroom has been added to the school system."

Questions in the list released health education and services in formation on such matters as health education and servcies in the schools, promotion and appointment of teachers, a new sick-leave plan, and relative merits of two sites proposed earlier for the new Vacation Lane junior high.

U. S. Grants $30,928 to 4 Researchers

Grants totaling $30,928 have been given to four scientists in three District institutions for research on problems affecting human health and illnesses, it was announced yesterday by Oscar Ewing, Federal Security administrator.

The grants were made through the National Institutes of Health, approved by Surgeon General Lennard A. Scheele on recommendation of the National Advisory Health Council. They are a part of 217 projects in 94 institutions taking an outlay of $2,056,426 in Federal funds.

The District scientists and projects are: Berwind P. Kauffman, Carnegie Institution, cell changes caused by irradiation, $8500; Walter C. Hess, Georgetown University, determination of androgens, testosterone and androsterone in blood, $2781; Charles F. Morgan, Georgetown University, a hormone study, $6415, and Howard M. Payne, Howard University, study of uses of streptomycin in tuberculosis, $13,232.

Nine scientists at Johns Hopkins University received grants totaling $100,369, and one at the University of Virginia, $9093.

Public Hearing Asked by Fired Policemen

Public hearing on the charges of inefficiency upon which their dismissals were based was asked yesterday by three Cottage City, Md., policemen.

Police Chief James W. Robertson said last night that any charges that he had been drinking on duty were "absolutely false" and that the charges actually grew out of a personal grudge held by Henry Caspare, sr., vice chairman of the town board of commissioners, who preferred the charges Friday night at a board meeting.

Robertson said he and Sergt. Albert Miller and Pvt. Lynn Plimpton have asked Commissioner Colin Ward, who was absent Friday night, to obtain a public hearing at which they can defend themselves.

Caspare charged at the meeting that the policemen were "inefficient and had not been performing their duties" and that numerous complaints had been given him by citizens who charged one of the men with drinking on duty.

Caspare refused to say which policeman was charged with drinking. Robertson said neither Caspare nor any other citizen could come in and say they had seen him drinking while on duty.

Robertson has been on the force about 12 years, Miller nearly 7 and Plimpton about 1 year. All are part-time policemen and receive $15 a month for working at night and on Saturday afternoon.

The next regular meeting of the Board of Commissioners will be held September 2 at 8 p. m. in the Cottage City firehouse at which time applicants for the three posts are expected to be considered.

Market May Get Helicopter Landing Field

Washington's first heliport—a landing field for helicopters—was in prospect as the operators of the Center Market City, 5th and K sts. nw., announced yesterday they will seek authority to establish one on the market roof.

Leo M. Bernstein & Co., operators, received word from the District Commissioners that they would consider licensing such a project if the Civil Aeronautics Authority approved.

A test run demonstrating use of the rooftop for quick delivery of fruit from the market to the Congressional Airport was made on June 24.

Six Reasons For Ousting Orme Filed By McNayr

County Manager Gives Six Reasons For Ouster; Public Hearing Promised

A six-point bill of complaint charging Montgomery County Police Chief Charles M. Orme with "wilful neglect" and "wilful sabotage" of county policy was handed to the County Council yesterday.

Orme was relieved of duty Friday by County Manager Irving G. McNayr, who brought yesterday's charges and asked that Orme be discharged.

The council postponed action and promised to schedule a public hearing.

After the accusations were read in the council meeting, Attorneys F. Barnard Welsh and James H. Pugh, representing Orme, announced they will file a detailed, point-by-point answer.

In a packed council room these charges were read against Chief Orme:

1. He "deliberately and willfully sabotaged a policy of the County Council" and County Manager when he told reporters last week he doubted the effectiveness of the one-man police car system inaugurated August 1 by the council.

Accused of Nonattendance

2. He attended only two of the 14 meetings of the Montgomery County Safety Council held since January, although asked by the council and county manager to appear at all of them.

3. He ignored a repeated order by the council and manager to attend the 1949-50 budget conference between department heads and the council last June.

Through his absence he failed "to promote the interests of (his) department before the council, the charges said.

4. Orme failed to tell the county manager or his police subordinates where he could be reached in case of emergency between June 9 and June 20, 1949. At that time, Orme had been granted a two weeks' leave of absence.

5. Orme was guilty of "willful neglect and extremely bad judgment" in approving a request of one of his policemen, Pvt. Daniel C. Barnes, to serve as "custodian" and live in a cabin in Rock Creek Park owned by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Orme said yesterday he had merely approved Barnes' request to live in the cabin. Orme's attorneys pointed out that Barnes' wife was the custodian.

"Evasive to Job Applicants"

6. Orme "evaded responsibility" and was guilty of "extremely bad public relations" in failing to give qualified applicants for police positions definite reasons for not recommending them for jobs. These applicants, McNayr stated, already had been cleared by the county personnel office. In several instances, according to the charge, Orme "evaded direct answers" to the job applicants.

McNayr said he asked Orme's ouster "principally" on the chief's press statement regarding one-man police cars.

"Insubordinate action such as this cannot be condoned in any department head in Montgomery County, and particularly by the chief of the police department," McNayr said in the charges.

"Should insubordination and sabotaging of orders be allowed to permeate the department, the effectiveness of policing in the county would be destroyed."

Acting Council President Thomas C. Kelley said the council could not act on the issue yesterday because only four of the seven members were present, and because Chief Orme had received his copy of the charges Monday.

Kelley said a full public hearing on the entire matter would be held, probably after the council meets next Tuesday.

Five Montgomery County organizations already have come to Chief Orme's defense, putting themselves on notice they will ask the council at the hearing to reinstate the chief.

Melrose Crossing Elimination Asked

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday called upon the Maryland State Roads Commission to take steps to eliminate the Melrose grade crossing in Hyattsville.

A resolution by Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh urged the roads body to act as soon as possible with "every pressure."

Two automobiles were demolished by trains at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad crossing during the past week, as their occupants escaped. At least a score of persons, however, have perished in accidents there.

County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman told the board there is little likelihood of securing either Federal or State aid until a survey of metropolitan highway needs, now under way, is completed, probably in the spring.

Tayman said extensions of Hamilton ave., construction of an underpass under Rhode Island ave. and the B. & O. tracks to hook up with the Baltimore blvd. near the bridge in Bladensburg—a long-advocated proposal to eliminate the Melrose crossing—would cost approximately $1,360,000.

This is too great a sum to be met by the county, Tayman said. State aid with Federal assistance will be needed to eliminate the dangerous crossing, he declared.

The commissioners declined to reduce the assessment on the Chillum Heights Apartments requested by Leopold V. Freudberg, appearing for the owners, who said the reduction would enable the apartment owners to reduce rents and keep their apartments rented.

T. L. Jacobs, member of a Chicago firm of financial advisers which is making a survey of Greenbelt to recommend proper methods of selling the Federally owned property to private owners, asked what assessment advances would be made there and if the county would continue services now enjoyed by the city. He was referred to County Assessments Supervisor Louis W. Kutsch, who said the county is "waiting for a chance" at Greenbelt assessments now set by agreement between the Federal Government and the county.

Charles L. Wood submitted his resignation as county sanitary engineer. He has accepted a post with the United States Public Health Service quarantine control in San Antonio, Tex., he said. He has been county sanitary engineer for 12 years.

Dorsey to Address Greenbelt Meeting

Philip H. Dorsey, Maryland Public Service Commission member, will be the principal speaker at the annual outing of the Twenty-first District Democratic Club at 1 p. m., August 13, at the American Legion Home in Greenbelt.

Invited guests include Gov. William Preston Lane, jr.; Senators Millard Tydings and Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), and State Senator L. Harold Sothoron.

Cravi Makes Stage Glow In Pagliacci

By Paul Hume

Pagliacci and Cavalleria Rusticana held the Watergate stage last night in Fortune Gallo's two-week operatic marathon.

Pagliacci is redeemable by good singing, in spite of unsubtle passions and hammy moments. The Prologue, Bird Song and Nedda-Silvio duet can be fine bits. When Mina Cravi sang to the birds last night she woke memories of the days when sopranos knew their music, their part, and the whole motivating psychology of a role.

Her voice was its most beautiful. The shimmer of her high soft A was perfection. She made the entire stage glow while she was on it. The lower-voiced men were good in their assignments. Grant Garnell makes a resonant Tonio, and Richard Torigi was well suited to Silvio's role.

It was an interesting aside to note that he played the wronged husband, Alfio, in the first opera, and quite the reverse in Pagliacci. He deserves a belated word of praise for his singing as Marcello in Sunday's Boheme.

Cavalleria Rusticana should be thoroughly washed, then dry-cleaned. If anything remains after these ablutions (which is not likely), it might be staged following detailed rehearsing. But it really is not worth the trouble. The music is incredibly cheap and the story so sordid that it is embarrassing to answer questions about it. Why not bury it now and forever?

Its unhappy heroine, Santuzza, was sung last night by Rina Telli. Youth is a fact but not an excuse for singers. Miss Telli has the makings of a fine voice but neither her use of it nor her lack of adequate training fit her for the leading roles in operas which once starred Raisa, Muzio or Ponselle. It is no kindness to Telli to let her continue without coaching which could rescue her.

Mario Palermo's voice is sufficient for Turiddu. If he will not force it, its quality will remain pleasing throughout its rather wide range. Deanna De Sanctos made Mamma Lucia believable and added another good performance to her list of the past week.

Alessandro Granda sang Canio in Pagliacci. Even though he is a bad singer, a conductor should not abandon him on a high note in a big aria. The evening was graceless as far as chorus and orchestra were concerned, with few, happy exceptions.

Tonight: Faust, with Gravi.

The National Capital Chapter of Girard College alumni will hold its annual picnic from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Sunday at Grove No. 110, 16th st. and Cherrier dr., Rock Creek Park, near Walter Reed Hospital. William Temple, secretary-treasurer, and Al Patterson will be in charge.

Burn Victim in Hospital . . .

Boy Burned When Friend Fires Gasoline

A 14-year-old boy was recovering yesterday at Casualty Hospital from first and second degree burns to his face, chest, and one leg. He told his parents he was burned when a playmate threw a match in a can of gasoline and it tipped over toward him while gushing flame.

The lad is Jimmy C. Martin, who with his 16-year-old sister, Betty, is visiting his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Martin, at 1828 L st. ne.

Mrs. Martin said the boy ran in the house Monday evening and started to bathe with cold water. Then he called for salve, she said. When she began to apply it, she said, he screamed with pain and ran outside. She then discovered the seriousness and extent of the burns.

She took him to a private physician who treated him and then had him admitted to the hospital.

The boy told her, Mrs. Martin said, that the mishap occurred at a nearby filling station. She was mystified, she said, how he received the burns as extensively as he did without burning his clothing.

Police began an inquiry into the case.

Electric Cooperative May Sell Part of Plant

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 9 (AP). The Shenandoah Valley Electric Cooperative decided today to offer part of its facilities for sale to the Old Dominion Electric Cooperative, State-wide organization made up of 11 electric cooperatives in Virginia.

Fireman Hurt In Traffic on M St. Call

A fire in a leather goods shop at 3278 M st. nw., which was out before firemen got there, yesterday led indirectly to two separate traffic accidents in which a fireman was injured and a fire truck was slightly damaged.

Pvt. George Beach, 42, of Engine Company No. 5, who lives at 1207 N. Adams st., Arlington, suffered a fractured left arm and a possible skull fracture when he left the store, started across the street through the congested traffic and walked into a street car operated by Robert H. Robertson, 37, of 520 Rhode Island ave. ne. Beach's condition was reported "fairly good" by Emergency Hospital, where he was taken.

Ten minutes after this accident, a motorist cracked into the fire truck, drawn up across the street. Damage was so slight police didn't bother to get the motorist's name.

In another accident, Clarence L. Smith, jr., 14, of 417 New York ave. nw., suffered cuts and bruises and possible head injuries yesterday when his bicycle collided with an automobile driven by Sidney Ehrlich, 54, of 5030 Seventh st. nw., in the 400 block M st. nw. Smith was taken to Freedman's Hospital, where his condition was undetermined last night.

Five Employes Seized in Store on Numbers Charges

Five maintenance and service employes of Kann's Deparmtent Store were arrested on gambling charges at the store yesterday.

Six members of the police vice squad, accompanied by four United States marshals made the arrests carefully in different parts of the store simultaneously. Customers were unaware of what was taking place.

Arrested in an elevator was Abraham Loube, 56-year-old tailor, of 1216 Hemlock st. nw. He was charged with operating a lottery, possession of numbers slips, and setting up a gaming table. He was released in $2500 bond for appearance today before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

The other four, all porters, were charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. Each was released in $1500 bond for appearance today before Commissioner Lawrence. They are:

Booker Thomas White, 39, 1909 30th pl. se.; William Albert Mundell, 57, 1206 D st. ne.; Albert Pittman, 43, 7 New York ave. nw., and Charles Bailey, 50, 308 50th st. ne.

Police said undercover operatives had the men under observation for some time. Store employes apparently were their customers, police said.

Authorities acted with the cooperation of the store's officials, police said.

Senate Meals Taxable, Federal Reserve Exempt

District Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West yesterday ruled that meals served in the Federal Reserve Building are not subject to the sales tax, while those in the Senate restaurant of the Capitol are.

He pointed out that the food service in the former is operated by a unit of the Government, while in the latter it is handled by a concessionaire, the Nationwide Food Service, Inc. Sales by governmental units are not subject to the city sales tax.

W. E. Pulliam Dead; Served U. S. 46 Years

William Ellis Pulliam, 78, retired treaty official and originator of the idea of a memorial to Christopher Columbus in the Dominican Republic, died yesterday at his home, Carmelby-the-Sea, Calif.

Mr. Pulliam

Mr. Pulliam was the uncle of Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.).

He retired from the customs service in 1939 after serving under six Presidents.

Mr. Pulliam was born in Louisville, Ky., the son of Henry Clay and Mary Page Pulliam. He obtained a bachelor of laws degree from the University of Oregon.

Customs Collector

He began his long Government career in 1893 when he was appointed deputy collector of customs at Portland, Oreg. In 1898 he became a special agent of the Treasury Department and in 1901 he went to the Philippines as a customs expert in Manila. Two years later he was made special deputy collector of customs there and held that post until 1907.

In that year he was appointed receiver general of Dominican customs in the Dominican Republic and remained there until his retirement in 1939.

The idea of a Pan-American Columbus Memorial came to him in 1914. The project was adopted by the Fifth International Conference at Santiago in 1923 and in 1927 the United States Senate adopted a joint House resolution approving the memorial.

The memorial was the subject of a special message to Congress by President Coolidge in 1928. It gained final approval of the Pan-American Conference in 1933.

Ground Broken in 1946

Ground for the memorial, a lighthouse at Ciudad Trujillo, was broken in 1946.

Mr. Pulliam was decorated for his efforts in behalf of the memorial with the Order of Juan Pablo Duarte of the Dominican Republic in 1935 and the Qrder of the Crown of Italy in 1938.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Murial Cartwright Pulliam; a son, Ellis Page Pulliam of San Francisco; a daughter, Mrs. Phyllis P. Jervey, wife of Col. William Wesson Jervey of 1704 37th st. nw., and a brother, John P. Pulliam of Milwaukee.

James W. (Flick) Meade

Funeral services for James Wilmer "Flick" Meade, 48, who taught members of St. Mary's Boys Club in Alexandria how to box, will be held this morning at 10:30 at the Demaine funeral home, 520 S. Washington st., Alexandria. Burial will follow in Mount Comfort cemetery.

He died Sunday from a heart attack at the Alexandria Hospital.

During the past decade, more than 300 boys learned boxing from the soft-spoken instructor. He lived at 404 E. Alexandria ave., and was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

He is survived by a son, James Wilmer Meade, jr., Williamson, N. C.; his mother, Mrs. Mary Schlichting, and a sister, Mrs. Harvey Hadlock, both of Lynchburg, and a brother, Charles E. Meade of Alexandria.

Mrs. Elizabeth Klinehanse

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Klinehanse, 76, member of a family of second-generation Washingtonians, will take place at 2 p. m. Thursday at the Lee funeral chapel, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne.

Mrs. Klinehanse, widow of William L. Klinehanse, died Monday. She lived at 231 B st. ne.

She was a member of Martha Chapter, No. 4 O. E. S.; of Myra B. Enright Camp, Royal Neighbors; of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, and a past counselor of Progressive Council, No. 9, Daughters of America.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Elsie Speer, and Mrs. Beulah Pence; a son, William H. Klinehanse; three brothers, Clarence T. Lacy, William H. Lacy and Walter L. Lacy; and one grandson, all of Washington. Burial will be at Congressional Cemetery.

Benard N. McFeely

Hoboken, N. J., Aug. 9 (AP). Bernard N. McFeely, 68, onetime political lieutenant of Frank Hague and Democratic mayor of this waterfront city, died last night.

McFeely, one of New Jersey's most colorful political figures, was ousted from office by a fusion group two years ago. He had served as mayor for 17 years and had more than a dozen relatives on the city payroll.

Yeggs Remove $500 In Safe in Stolen Car

A 450-pound safe containing $500 was stolen from Martin & Boyd Spring Works, 622 L st. ne., sometime Monday night or early Tuesday. The yeggs removed the safe in a car which they also stole from the premises. It had been left there for minor repairs.

Hyattsville police recovered the stolen sedan, found abandoned on Lanham rd., Hyattsville. The forced, emptied safe was found in nearby bushes.

Davenport Dies; Veteran Actor in Films

Hollywood, Aug. 9 (AP).—Harry Davenport, 83, silver-haired character actor who had spent 78 years in the theatrical profession, died of a heart ailment today.

Davenport

Davenport first appeared in a stage role in Philadelphia at the age of 5 and made his first appearance on the screen for the old Pathe Studio in 1912.

He had appeared in more than 100 pictures, including "Gone With the Wind," "Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Enchanted Forest" and the as yet unreleased "Forsythe Saga."

Davenport, born in New York, is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Davenport Reid, widow of Actor Wallace Reid; Kate Davenport and Ann Davenport and a son, Edward L. Davenport.

John W. (Jack) Vollmer

Funeral services for John Watson "Jack" Vollmer, 56, for more than 30 years an accountant for D. N. Burnham & Co., will be held this morning at St. Martin's Catholic Church, Gaithersburg. Burial will be in St. Rose's Cemetery at Clopper.

A veteran of World War I, Mr. Vollmer died Sunday night after an illness of about six months. He had been active in American Legion circles in Montgomery County, and was a member of the Barber-Briggs Post of Gaithersburg. His home was in Washington Grove.

Mr. Vollmer was born in St. Louis, but moved to Montgomery County when a boy. He graduated from the old Rockville High School, now Richard Montgomery High, and from Benjamin Franklin University.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Federline Vollmer, whom he married only a few months ago, and his mother, Mrs. Jennie R. Vollmer, Washington Grove.

Mrs. Sumner Welles

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 9 (AP). — Funeral services for Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the former United States Undersecretary of State, will be held here tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Welles died early yesterday

Welles' son, Benjamin, a correspondent for the New York Times in London, arrived in Lausanne by plane last night.

A niece of Mrs. Welles, Mrs. Donald McElroy of New York, is expected to arrive by plane this evening with her husband.

Cremation services here will be private with only Welles and the other members of the family here present. Welles will fly back to the United States over the weekend. Services also will be held at the Welles home at Oxon Hill, Md.

Dr. E. L. Thorndike

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Dr. Edward Lee Thorndike, 75, originator of the Thorndike intelligence test, died of a stroke today at his home in suburban Montrose.

His doctor's thesis was credited with being the beginning of animal psychology as a scientific study. He devised scales to measure excellence of reading, English composition, hand-writing and drawing and intelligence tests for all levels of education.

Baldanzi to Direct CIO Drive in South

The CIO yesterday chose George Baldanzi, 42, executive vice president of the Textile Workers, to head its Southern organizing campaign.

Baldanzi succeeds the late Van A. Bittner, with whom he had been associated since the CIO opened a full-scale organizing drive in the South in 1946.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

House Group Reports 'Extremely Poor Administration' in Maritime Unit

By The Associated Press

Chairman Hardy (D., Va.) said yesterday a House Expenditures Subcommittee investigation of Maritime Commission's ship subsidies has "uncovered evidence, not of dishonesty but of extremely poor administration."

The hearing turned to the question whether pressure had been brought within the commission to increase the subsidies for ship operators.

One maritime technician, A. D. Beitleman, said he had been "threatened" by a superior when he refused to agree upon a cost figure that meant a larger subsidy.

This superior, Beitleman said, threatened to tell the commission "your calculations are the damnedest hodge-podge I have ever seen." Later he was told by another superior, the witness said, that "it wasn't for me to decide" on the particular calculation involved.

Hardy told newsmen that two days' hearings have substantiated "some of the charges" by Comptroller Lindsay C. Warren that not less than 25 million dollars granted in subsidies on six ships "must be considered as excessive, due to various irregular procedures, inaccurate calculations and unjustifiably liberal interpretations of statutory language."

Certainly the inquiry has exposed "inaccuracies" in the commission, Hardy said.

The investigation covered subsidies for the $70,373,000 superliner being built for United States Lines, and five other vessels. Testimony showed that a $42,285,784 Government subsidy is involved in the big ship.

Two vessels for the American Export Lines, and three for the American President Lines also are involved.

Congress has set a subsidy policy to encourage construction of ships in American yards, with an idea of offsetting the much lower cost of building ships abroad. This policy also takes into account the national defense value of vessels.

Geneva Vote Kills A-Bomb Outlaw Effort

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 9 (AP). A Soviet effort to outlaw the atomic bomb was decisively rejected here today by a 60-nation conference revising the Geneva war conventions.

The conference threw out the resolution by 35 votes to 9, with 5 abstentions. The delegation of Israel unexpectedly voted in favor of the resolution, and provided the Russians with their only non-Communist support.

The same resolution was discussed and rejected by a conference committee last month. In both cases the principal argument of the majority was that any prohibition of atomic weapons was beyond the competence of the conference.

MRS. AUSTIN OSGOOD

Miss Fuqua, Austin Osgood Are Married

The marriage of Miss Katharyn Fuqua, daughter of Mrs. Katharyn Collins Fuqua, to Austin Branch Osgood, of Charlottesville, Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Osgood of Charleston, S. C., took place yesterday at 5:30 in a simply arranged ceremony at the home of the bride's mother at the Shoreham Hotel.

The couple left later for Long Island and Cape Cod and will be entertained at a reception by Mrs. Fuqua when they return in the early fall.

The bride attended the Deverell French School in New York and was graduated from Holton Arms, Washington. After making her debut she continued her study of music at the Washington College of Music.

Mr. Osgood formerly lived in Boston. He has made his home at Carter Ridge Farm, known locally as Patterson Mountain, Charlottesville, for several years.

He was educated at Middlesex School, Concord, Mass., and was graduated from Yale, class of 1934. He is a member of the Farmington Hunt Club, the Keswick Country Club, and Farmington Country Club and the Tennis and Racquet Club in Boston.

Harris & Swing
MRS. PHILIP DANA FAUROTE, before her marriage yesterday in Bethesda, Md., was Miss Laura S. Peat, daughter of Mrs. Sylvia D. Peat of San Diego, Calif. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy C. Faurote of Bethesda. Following reception at the Faurote home the newlyweds left for a month's wedding trip to California.

In Bridal Procession

Foundry Methodist Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Mildred A. Cressler, daughter of Mrs. Olin Hartman Cressler, to Warren Ruthren Smith on July 31.

Given in marriage by W. L. Clark, the bride wore a gown of white crepe. Miss Easter Dickman was the maid of honor and Charles Swanston served as best man. Colonel Denver Wilson and Theodore Haspel were ushers.

Sawtelle—Savage

Congress Heights Baptist Church was the scene of the marriage August 2 of Miss Marie Savage to Donald Wing Sawtelle jr. The Rev. A. Lincoln Smith officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Savage and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Sawtelle.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore embroidered organdy with a seed pearl tiara holding her veil. She carried white rosebuds.

Misses Elizabeth and Kathleen Savage were bridesmaids for their sister. Robert Sawtelle was his brother's best man and the ushers were Edward Sawtelle and Charles Zigler. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. On return from their wedding trip to the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee the newlyweds will live in Washington.

Gala Reception Honors President Quirino After His Dinner for Truman

By Marie McNair

MRS. TRUMAN broke up a Presidential stag party at the Statler Hotel last night, coming over from Blair House to receive guests at the reception given by Philippine Ambassador Joaquin Elizalde, in honor of his President, Elpidio Quirino.

Earlier there had been a formal dinner with President Quirino as host President Truman as honor guest. And the group, numbering 49, dined off tenderloin of beef, filet of sole, with Liebfraumilch Sichel, 1937, Pommard Sichel, 1937, and Charles Heidsieck, 1931, as the vintage wines.

The First Lady, in a flowery print of blue, purple and white, was the sole feminine member in the reception receiving line which was headed by President Quirino, included President Truman and Senor Elizalde. The doors opened promptly at 10, and less than half an hour later President and Mrs. Truman were whisked home to Blair House.

For a town which usually gives over to summer doldrums there were a surprising number of official families turning up for the event. John Steelman, a guest at the dinner, found his pretty blonde wife later, Mrs. Steelman looking her prettiest in pale pink tulle with a froth of tiny lace ruffles on the skirt.

Interest centered about Gen. Claire Chennault, in white dinner jacket, and his tiny Chinese wife, in black satin tunic covered with pale green and rose embroidery, posing willingly for the cameramen.

"There's no dignity left in public life," said Secretary of Defense Johnson as he smiled and put an arm around Mrs. Johnson and flashbulbs popped. Cameras were trained too, on beautiful Mrs. Lovina, wife of Primitivo Lovina, Philippine Secretary of Labor. She fairly breathed Paris in a taupe tulle frock fitted to the knees, flared to the hem, with the newest winglike drapery at the shoulders.

Ambassador Myron Cowen, our envoy in Manila, brought his mother and his wife with him, the latter wearing a white and black satin print, with dropped decolletage showing a pair of well-tanned shoulders.

Ambassadors There

I saw the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, going down the line, but not Mme. Bonnet; the Nicaraguan Ambassador Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, without his Senora, who is expecting the stork; the Dominican Ambassador and Seonar de Thomen and the Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila.

The tall Portuguese Ambassador, Pedro Theotonio Pereira, was right behind Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, whose black tulle frock swept behind her as she greeted her host. Senator Owen Brewster wa sthere and Senator oJhn L. McClellan and Mrs. McClellan in a summery frock of white lace. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers trailed a pink frock too, wit ha gay pink scarf in her hand.

Popular Guests

There was Paul McNutt, bronzed and white-haired, getting a real welcome back in Washington, and reporting that he had left Mrs. McNutt in New York. There was Mme. Pandit, the Indian Ambassador, in amethyst satin and chiffon bordered in gold, with her daughter, Miss Rita Pandit, and ladies of the embassy in tow.

Dr. Philip Jessup was almost constantly surrounded. So were the James Webbs—he's Undersecretary of State—Mrs. Webb in a low cut black lace frock.

White and Blue Gowns

Then, Assistant Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Mrs. Rusk, Senator Homer Ferguson and his charming Missus in white satin splashed with red roses; the Charge d'Affaires of Spain and Senora de Baraibar and their daughters, Gen. and Mrs. Stanley Embick, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; the Yugoslav Ambassador, Sava Kosanovic and Mme. Mica Trbojevic; Larry Lehrbas; Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, in pale blue; Edgar Morris, and the Brison Norrisses, she in hydrangea-blue chiffon.

On the stairs I met the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Snyder and their daughter, Drucie, the two ladies looking like mannequins in slim black.

Mrs. Edward Treglown and Tom Burke were exchanging news—Ruth Treglown revealing that her stay here is very brief for she's flying back to Nassau tomorrow, Tom Burke admitting he's a summer bachelor as his Anna is on Long Island.

Guests at the stag dinner, in addition to President Truman, the Philippine Ambassador, and Secretary of State Dean Acheson, included: Myron Cowen, Undersecretary of State James Webb, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, Secretary of the Interior Julius Krug, Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, and Presidential Assistant John Steelman.

Former Ambassadors to the Philippines who were there were Paul McNutt and Emmet O'Neal. From the Congress there were Senator George Malone, Senator Scott Lucas, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Senator Dennis Chavez, Senator Kenneth Wherry, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Representative Jasper Bell and Representative Karl Stefan.

Rings on Their Fingers

Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Wing of Easton, Pa., announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Louise, to Collins Stewart Hyers, son of Comdr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Hyers of Washington.

The bride-elect is a senior at Connecticut College for Women. Her fiance attended the University of Florida and Georgia Institute of Technology. He served two years in the Navy and was graduated from the U. S. Coast Guard Academy in June.

Israel-Lindtner

Mr. and Mrs. George G. Israel of Garrett Park, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty O'Neal, to Frederick N. Lindtner, son of Col. and Mrs. Frederick Lindtner, now stationed in Paris, France. The wedding is to take place August 27 at St. Paul's Methodist Church, Kensington, Md.

Ware—Chastain

Mrs. Irene Root Ware of Fort Thomas, Ky., announces the approaching marriage of her daughter, Almyra, to the Rev. David Franklin Chastain jr., pastor of Christ Baptist Church of this city.

The wedding will take place August 30 at the First Baptist Church in Fort Thomas. The Rev. T. E. Daugherty will officiate and a reception will follow at Mrs. Ware's home.

Miss Ware attended Schuster Martin School of Drama in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Baylor University in Waco, Tex. The bridegroom was graduated from Emory University and also did graduate work there in economics. He received his master of theology degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Pearce—McCoy

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Leon Pearce of Washington announce the engagement of their daughter, Anne Dillen, to Ensign Elbert J. McCoy USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin L. McCoy of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Wiesbaden, Germany.

Miss Pearce was graduated from the National Cathedral School for Girls and Wilson College in Chambersburg, Pa. Her fiance graduated from the United States Naval Academy in June and is now serving on the USS Wright.

The wedding will take place September 14.

Mrs. Mesta Feted

MRS. Perle Mesta, American Minister to Luxembourg, was the guest in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt entertained at dinner last evening at their home on Wyoming ave. Vice President Barkley, father of the hostess, was among the guests who numbered 40.

Mr. and Mrs. Truitt returned this week from a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies at their Adirondacks camp. Mrs. Truitt will spend the weekend in Kentucky, and will then go to Truitt's Virginia farm.

About Removing Iron Rust Stains

Would you be so kind as to repeat directions for removing iron rust from cotton material. I have already tried lemon juice and an iron-rust soap, neither of which has been successful.
E. G. B.

You may be able to remove the stains by using oxalic acid. (Oxalic acid is poisonous, so use it with great care). Get a 5 percent solution at a drug store and soak the stain in it for 15 minutes. Rinse three times and to the last rinse add a few drops of household ammonia. If the material is colored, be sure to try the oxalic acid on an inconspicuous spot before placing it on the stain because it is a bleach.

Is there any known solvent for chewing gum? Some has recently been trodden into my living room carpet which is the type known as "loom-lock."
D. W.

Harden the gum by holding a piece of ice to it and pick off as much of it in one piece as possible. When no more can be removed this way, sponging the spot with carbon tetrachloride should remove the rest of it.

Do you know of any liquid that may be sprayed on woolen and leathers to prevent mold and mildew from this high humidity? Is there any way to remove the odor of mold from such fabrics?
A. R. S.

There is a liquid which can be purchased most places where moth preventives are sold which can be sprayed on woolens and wiped on leathers to prevent them from mildewing. For spraying, it is diluted with one cup of water to each one half cup of solution. To treat leathers with it, the manufacturer suggests you use it as it comes from the bottle, wiping it on the article with a soft cloth. The first application is allowed to dry completely and is then repeated. This application should be sufficient to keep the article mildew-free for a season.

The same product will remove mildew odors and prevent them in the future. The solution can also be added to starch to prevent clothes from mildewing before ironing. Complete directions for this come with the product.

Could you tell me how to clean and polish driftwood for use as shelf pieces? L. R. J.

Sand with a fine sandpaper until satin smooth and then wipe with a soft cloth to remove all dust. When smooth and clean, rub colorless wax into the wood, allow to dry and polish. To give a durable finish, apply two or three thin coats of wax and rub vigorously.

Will you advise where I can purchase materials to do my own picture framing? I am interested particularly in just a simple black wooden frame, not exceeding two inches in width. I can, of course, have the framing done at any one of a number of places, but should like to do it myself and reduce the costs.
J. V. W.

You can buy moulding by the foot at lumber and millwork stores. Also, the firms which make picture frames to order will sometimes sell just the moulding by the foot, though it would be more expensive than that purchased from lumber yards, because finished.

Also, for just a very little more than the materials would cost, you can buy ready made unfinished oak frames in sizes from 9 by 12 inches to 24 by 30 inches. These frames will take almost any kind of finish you wish to apply. One store selling these is a paint store on 13th st. which can be reached by calling District 1130.

I have a white wool gabardine suit. Some parts have become slightly yellowed after a first dry cleaning, either from the fluid or from pressing. What can I do to remove the stains?
A. H. L.

You may be able to remove the spots or at least make them lighter by dampening them with clear water and dusting powdered sodium perborate into them. Allow the fabric to dry thoroughly and brush out the perborate. If some improvement is seen, but the stains are not completely removed the treatment may be repeated. Sodium perborate is a mild bleach which is safe to use on woolens and can be purchased at most drug stores.

I am planning a December wedding. The men in the party will be in Navy uniforms. I would like to know what my father should wear and also what the ring bearer should wear. I would also like some ideas for the reception. It will be just for the bridal party, family and friends and will be held at my home.
J. E.

Since you didn't say the time of day of the ceremony or whether it was to be a church or home wedding, I can't be too specific in my answer. However, if it is to be a daytime informal wedding your father could very appropriately wear a navy blue business suit. If the wedding is to be a strictly formal evening one with the bride's mother in floor length dress, your father should wear a tuxedo or white tie and tails.

For an informal wedding, the ring bearer will wear the same sort of clothes he or she would wear for Sunday best. For a more formal wedding, if the bearer is a girl, and the other members of the party are in floor length dresses, it would be appropriate to dress her similarly.

The reception usually immediately follows the ceremony. For a small reception there is no formal receiving line, but the bride, bride groom and attendents would stand together before the fireplace or a large window to receive their guests. The mother of the bride is of course hostess and should be near the front door to greet the guests as they arrive. The father of the bride may stand with his wife or circulate about the room visiting with the guests.

The food for a reception may be as simple or elaborate as you wish. It is prettily arranged on the dining room table with the wedding cake for a centerpiece. In addition to wedding cake you could serve a fruit punch, dainty open faced sandwiches, mints and nuts. You should arrange in advance for friends to assist in the dining room and kitchen too, if you have no paid help. Also, designate someone to pour.

For Neophytes Seeking Jobs

DON'T BE too humble about your lack of business experience when you're out looking for your first job this fall, says the August issue of Charm, magazine for the business girl.

Concentrate, rather, on stressing the training you have had. For actually you have been in training all your life for your first job. The many experiences you have already had have helped to make your character. This is evident in the honesty of your eyes as they meet the prospective employer's, the easy way you stand and walk, your pleasant voice. Mention the responsibilities that you've met, the abilities you've developed, the friendships you've maintained.

Instead of worrying because you have no lengthy record of employment with which to make an impression, concentrate on outward symbols of your inward grace and neatness. For your appearance, particularly, is the direct result of your previous experience at the full-time job of living. Make sure your hair is smooth, your complexion natural, and your suit pressed. Wear trimly tailored clothes, chosen for business and not for dazzle.

Judging by appearance, your employer will see at a glance that you'll do—and do very well, even without a long record of previous jobs.

Man Remorsefully Married Girl Whose Child He Casually Begot Out of Wedlock, But He Had Another Sweetheart and Still Wants Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: At the age of 19 I was going with a girl I was very much in love with, and she with me. Then I met Ella and started going with her, too, on casual dates.

I could see that Ella was falling in love with me, and in my vanity I was quite pleased with myself at being able to capture the affections of two lovely young ladies. I took advantage of Ella's love and a child was conceived out of wedlock.

I married Ella to protect her honor and to give the child a name; and after the ceremony I solemnly swore to myself to forget the other girl whom I really loved. I never had a father after I was 5 years old, and I wanted to be a good father and husband.

Girl Makes Good Wife and Mother

I HAVE TRIED for a year and a half to make this marriage work; and my wife is a good wife and a wonderful mother, but I just can't get the other girl out of my mind. I know I sinned against God and I have prayed God's forgiveness.

I want to do what is right, but I don't know whether to devote my life to my young family or to get a divorce and marry the girl whom I have loved and always will want. This girl has told me, after hearing my story, that she still loves me and would marry me in the event I would divorce my present wife. Can you help me? Any advice you give me will be much appreciated. A. G.

Character Doesn't Grow Effortlessly

DEAR A. G.: Jesus, who understood the hearts of men, might have been speaking to you when he said, "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." (Luke 9:62.)

And in his own darkest hour, in the garden of Gethsemane, He exclaimed, "The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak—," showing that even he was gripped by dismay when his great testing-time dawned. (Matthew 14:38.)

It doesn't come easily to the human breed to follow the higher laws of being, rather than the lower, in seeking "satisfactions." For people aren't "born good," so much as they are born with a crude conglomerate of conflicting responses to stimuli—and endowed with (1) volitional faculty and (2) a spiritual compass of sorts which warns instinctively "this is good" and "that is bad."

The achievement of rational Christian character is slow, hard work, indeed the work of a lifetime, involving difficult choices and patient disciplines. The road winds uphill all the way, as the poet Christina Rosseti beautifully says.

Man to Succeed Must Persevere

YET as the scientist Lecompte du Nouys points out in his epochal book, "Human Destiny" (Longmans Green & Company), it seems to be mankind's special function in the universe to take this road, to follow the trail that Jesus blazed, and from future heights to do greater things even than Jesus did by way of example, as Jesus Himself prophesied to his apostles.

Those who can't take the assignment, who renounce the struggle for soul growth, are "unfit for the kingdom," in Jesus' words; or, from the scientific viewpoint, chaff cast aside as worthless, doomed to extinction, as the evolutionary process—the "mills of the gods,"—grinds slowly on.

The disciple Paul, a turbulent terror in youth and a heroic man of God in age, reviewing the course over which he had come, said of himself, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith—," and my advice to you is to so live that in the end you may say the same. You took the right course in marrying Ella and vowing to be true to her and your child; and 18 months is hardly a speck of time, from the larger perspective, in which to judge how well you can do, if you faithfully try.

M. H.

For Jaded Ensembles

To pep up a tired summer ensemble, try putting on new ceramic buttons, and making earrings to match.

Hot Weather Dish

Here's a good hot weather dish.

BANANA MILK PUNCH

2 eggs, separated
1 quart milk, chilled
⅛ teaspoonful salt
1 teaspoonful vanilla
1 pint ice cream
Chopped nuts

Slice bananas and mash until smooth and creamy, or put through sieve. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add chilled milk and mashed bananas, salt and vanilla. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into banana mixture, blending thoroughly. Serve very cold, topping each glass with three tablespoons vanilla ice cream and a sprinkling of grated nutmeg or chopped nuts. For a sweeter drink, two tablespoons of sugar may be added. Serves six.

SALADS FOR HOT DAYS—Make the most of good meat salads in planning meals for hot days. Leftover roast, cut in chunks and combined with colorful vegetables, makes this delightful Swiss Meat Salad. To round out the menu, have scalloped potatoes, hot rolls and fresh peach sundaes

SWISS MEAT SALAD

2 cups cubed cold lamb or roast pork
1 cup cooked peas
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup French dressing
½ cup chopped walnut meats
Lettuce
2 tomatoes cut in eighths

Marinate meat and peas in French dressing for at least 30 minutes. Add nuts and celery and arrange on lettuce leaves. Garnish with tomato wedges. This makes four to six servings.

Gone—As Ewe Herd!

Market Lends New Nostalgia To: 'Mary Had a Little Lamb'

Chicago, (AP).—It's a fairly good bet you won't eat any lamb chops today.

Most of us won't. The main reasons, besides our meat tastes, are that the price is up and the supply is down.

The U. S. sheep population slid from a record high of 56,213,000 head in 1942 to a record low of 31,963,000 in 1949—a sharp drop of 24,250,000.

Experts don't expect any sizable increase in the next few years.

If you don't like lamb, you can say, "So what?" But there's another angle—wool. Wool touches the life of just about all of us. The National Wool Growers Association says U. S. production has plunged from 454 million pounds of shorn and pulled wool in 1942 to an estimated 250 million pounds this year.

As sheep herds shrank, prices went up. In mid-July, 1942, spring lambs sold for $17 per hundred pounds on the Chicago market. They sold for $26 in mid-July this year.

Can't Beat Chops

Nice lamb chops, now around $1 a pound, are close to the top of the meat price list in retail shops. Leg-of-lamb is less expensive but it, too, is pretty high on the list. Lamb chops have come down about 7 per cent and leg-of-lamb about 4 per cent from last year's retail top. But the average of all meat has declined about 13 per cent.

Fortunately, the cattle and hog populations have been growing. But lamb has fallen off to a point where it amounts to only about 3.5 per cent of total United States meat production.

How much that means to you may depend on where you live. The heavy lamb-eating areas are the East and West Coasts. The National Livestock and Meat Board polled hundreds of housewives in 34 cities across the country. The findings: 74 per cent said they like lamb. That indicated a good potential market for lamb.

Why did the sheep population dwindle?

The question was laid before the National Livestock Producers Association; the National Wool Growers Association; Col. Edward N. Wentworth, author of books on sheep and director of the livestock bureau at Armour & Co., and others. The answer went like this:

Early in the war wool and lamb meat prices were frozen at relatively low levels. Many sheepherders gave up the lonely life on the wide open spaces in the West, got jobs in town at better pay and shorter hours, and stayed there. Competent help was hard to get.

The cost of raising sheep went up. Many sheepmen put cattle, instead of sheep, on the ranges. Cattle didn't require as much labor and yielded a better profit during the war.

Cooking Cues . . .

Lettuce is plentiful and nutritious—so serve it often right now. Use it in salads and sandwiches. As soon as it comes from the market tear off any withered leaves on the outside of the head. Rinse the head off under cold running water before storing it in a covered container in the refrigerator. Never soak lettuce in water before storing. Instead of using a covered container for the lettuce you may wrap it in a damp cloth if you like.

Rhubarb contains so much water that it needs little more, if any, when you cook it. Use it in jam, in a deep dish pie, with other fruits in a compote, or in turnovers.

Club Kavakos this week is featuring "The Velvetones," a quartet of 19-year-olds from Central High, two of whom are torn between their vocal chords and their biceps. That is to say, they are wondering whether to continue with the quartet or become professional athletes.

In close harmony, they deliver everything from barbershop to love songs.

Bob Johnson, a basketball and baseball star, is weighing an offer from the Philadelphia Phillies.

Jimmy Pantos, basketball and football star, has another year at Central—and more time in which to make up his mind.

A third member is Joe Diamond, all musical, and a popular tenor at Central High. He does all the arrangements.

Edward Modarelli is the barbershop enthusiast of the foursome.

The other act at the Kavakos is Chuck Mitchell, who tried to break Petrillo's ban by forming a "vochestra" of about ten people, each of whom imitated a different instrument.

Chuck walked into this office the other morning, opened his mouth and out came a reasonable facsimile of Tommy Dorsey's famous trombone solo. Then his expression changed and what we heard sounded remarkably like a steel guitar.

She's All Curves

Jane Abjures Calisthenics But Her Build's Beautiful

By Ida Jean Kain

JANE RUSSELL is beautiful proof that men prefer curves to ultra-streamlines.

"Just let me get a look at June Russell—that's all I ask" . . . I heard on all sides as I made my way into a gala event starring dozens of topflight entertainers at a recent benefit show. Apparently, Janie was the girl the boys were flocking to see.

JANE RUSSELL
. . . Proves men prefer curves

For vital statistics, Jane is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 135 pounds; bust 37, waist 27, hips 37 . . . all curves.

If I hadn't long ago given up the practice of trying to plan a story before an interview, I would after meeting Jane. She is totally different from anything I expected.

Jane is a good-natured, fun-loving girl who walks with a rolling gait and a careless posture, and hasn't an ounce of vanity. She was brought up with four brothers, all close together in age, which may account for the fact that she takes kidding with good humor—and she has plenty of it to take, particularly from Bob Hope. Bob's name for her is "Lumpy," Jane told me, and he likes to mention her "acting."

She Suffers No Neuroses

Janie will never have a nervous breakdown worrying about anything . . . least of all her career. Although she thinks it's fun to be in the movies, she likes to live each day happily as it comes along.

This carefree attitude made it a bit difficult to pin her down to anything specific. Since she started her career as a model, I asked for her advice to girls along that line, which she dismissed with one word . . . "Don't." Why not? Well, it's all work and no play and not very good pay.

Referring to the famous Russell curves, I asked if she took calisthentics. She looked positively startled at the idea and groaned "No."

On the diet score, she loves food and eats everything her husband cooks. Her husband, whom Hope called "Muscles," likes to do the cooking, and Jane has to do the dishes. She likes milk, meat and potatoes, and bread and butter, but doesn't eat desserts or sweets.

More unexpected answers: She doesn't mind telling her age—she is going on 28. She wishes she were 5 pounds thinner, but is afraid it wouldn't come off her hips.

Jane's weight is perfect and her figure could be, with a dash of exercise. In fact, she has the foundation for one of the best figures in filmland. And she is a natural beauty. Her curly hair is brown with gold glints in it, and she has dreamy brown eyes with gold flecks and an amused twinkle in them. She is enormously likable.

Here's Her Philosophy

Finding her so different, I wanted to know her philosophy of life. "I don't believe the Lord helps only those who help themselves," she told me. "I believe He helps those who love Him and trusts Him."

The benefit at which Jane was appearing was for the purpose of combating juvenile delinquency. Jane thinks youngsters would be happier and better off if they had more spiritual training. "They need to know the Lord better," she said simply. That's the way Jane was brought up.

This RKO star has been happily married for seven years, and makes the San Fernando Valley her home.

TODAY'S college miss is obliging as well as pretty. Take for instance the trio above: Elizabeth Smith (left) of William Smith College; Ann Milton of Mount Holyoke; and Dorothy Ward (right) of Immaculata Seminary. While the mercury was standing at a torrid 92 degrees, they climbed into the latest in cold weather styles and posed for us on the steps of George Washington University's Lisner Auditorium. Their outfits in a few weeks will make fashion news on the campus. Elizabeth wears a navy and green plaid wool skirt and neat chartreuse sweater with turtle neck. Ann, a petite brown-haired lassie, who will be a freshman this fall, chooses slacks of rich tartan plaid and a bat-sleeved red wool sweater. Her jacket is of corduroy. Tweed in a serviceable, handsome topcoat is modeled by Dorothy, at right. Cut for real comfort, it has a swing back, is belted all around, has huge patch pockets, and a removeable inner lining. The costumes are available in the College Shop at Jelleff's, and will be among those shown Friday at the Shoreham Hotel's

Nearly Mobbed by Grateful Women

Designer Dior Retains Full Skirts

By Sally Swing

Paris, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—Christian Dior was nearly mobbed by grateful women at his fashion show today when he gave them free-swinging skirts.

When the 2½ hour show was ended, the women crowded round to kiss their liberator. Dior himself was so touched he broke into tears.

"The fact I have kept many skirts full is very important," he sobbed. "I am overwhelmed by the praise."

In a fashion year when almost every Paris designer threw over the full, flattering skirt for the straight up-and-down line, which few women own, Dior showed swinging skirts, pleated skirts on about half his collection.

Dior's hemlines were only two inches below the knee—or about 15½ inches from the floor. He had a total of 176 ensembles; total takeaway price, $500,000.

Dior burst on the fashion world right after the war when such veterans as Molyneux and Schiaparelli were fumbling for "a sure line." Paris was worried about her position as style leader to the world.

Dior's "tulip look," promptly dubbed the "new look," added inches to hems, cost complete new wardrobes. But the "new look's" soft, natural shoulders, clinging waists and sweeping skirts are still popular.

Cheers From U. S.

Until Dior's show there was despair in the smart fashion salons over old-fashioned boned corsets, rigid diets, hip-bumping exercises. Buyers from New York, Chicago, Texas, wondered how to "sell" American women on squeezing into the new silhouette. Then Dior began to parade his models past the 500 visitors. He got gasps of pure pleasure.

For suits, Dior had smart, short straight skirts with interest at the top of the silhouette. Jackets had bloused backs, medium collars and were pinched in at the waist with an inch-wide leather belt.

Dior's collection varied between super full, mostly pleated skirts for afternoon, slinky dinner dresses and flared or draped skirts for cocktail wear.

'Scissors' Cut

An ingenious cut called the "sissors" gave a criss-cross slimming line to his sheaths. It was formed by two-feet-wide panels starting at the waist and crossing over in front to fall in a free-swinging inverted-V to the hem. It was also placed in the back to give a kind of bustle line with the flared ends gently falling over a straight skirt.

Stunning ball gowns with pinched-in waists, huge hoop skirts and 5-foot trains cost up to $1800 each. Most little evening dresses were short, but shimmering sequins embroidered on petal panels which decorated turquoise net formed the skirt of one fantastic creation.

Dior called his collection "Middle of the Century." for colors he preferred black, gray, red, gold, rose, blue, green and brown with touches of green or orange. Matrials used by the designer were wool, including a heavy black open weave with a rugged outdoors look; silk, satin and lots of taffeta.

Show Highlights

Several catchable ideas were:

1. Heavy dark wool peek-a-boo afternoon dresses with teardrop shaped holes cut in them.
2. Balloon or three-tiered sleeves, like a telescope, each tier wider than the last, flaring into a large cuff.
3. Evening dresses with a diagonal front, one wide shoulder strap, crossing diagonally over the back.
4. Three inch-wide jewels worn on the shouldrs of soft, pink satin, short dance dresses.
5. Little jeweled bands with stand-up horns worn around the head like tiaras.

TOBÉ SAYS—

Let Gown Suit YOU

You always hear it said that women dress either for men or for other women.

I'm a heretic about this. I believe you should dress to please yourself. For what you wear is probably one of the most important psychological factors in your life. So in order to be happy, and to be efficient in your daily life, you must like your clothes and be comfortable in them.

Everyone can learn what smart fashion is today—just by watching what the good stores in your city advertise.

Don't be afraid of making mistakes in taste. Choose what you like and what is becoming to you, and your taste will grow as your knowledge of fashion grows.

Be yourself—dress for yourself.

Negro Doctors Invited to D. C. AMA Meeting

Detroit, Aug. 9 (AP).—The American Medical Association today invited Negro doctors generally to attend clinical sessions at its midwinter meeting at Washington, D. C., December 6 to 9.

The invitation was extended to Negro physicians attending the annual convention of their National Medical Association. It came from Dr. George F. Lull, secretary and general manager of the AMA.

Dr. Lull told the doctors that "your membership in the National Medical Association will admit you to all clinical sessions of the AMA's midwinter meeting.

"It will be honored on the same basis as a fellowship card in the AMA," he declared.

Earlier, it was announced that Dr. Peter H. Murray, a past president of the NMA, had been named to the policy making body of the AMA. It was the first time a Negro had ever been chosen for that group.

Dr. Murray is director of the department of gynecology at Harlem Hospital, New York.

New 'Lung' Design Uses 'Spare Parts'

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 9 (AP).—A group of engineers announced today they have designed a wooden "iron lung" that can be built in 24 hours from an inner tube, alarm clock, washing machine motor, plywood and other materials.

They offered to send blueprints and plans for the machine to any community that requests them.

The lung was built by the engineering staff of the Eureka-Williams Co. plant and other citizens in their spare time. R. C. Osborn, vice president of engineering at the plant, said the men avoided using any equipment or instruments that might be difficult to find in a hurry.

Here are the necessary materials. A tractor tire inner tube, an alarm clock, an hydraulic automobile jack, a washing machine motor and gearbox, a large washtub, ordinary household electrical switches and cable, and plywood.

The machine can be operated manually in case of power failure. The alarm clock is used as a warning. It will go off in case of a power failure.

Allergy Drugs' Combat TB, Tests Show

Hamburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Drugs used for allergy sufferers have produced "encouraging results" in treating tuberculosis, the medical publication Annals of Allergy reports.

Two physicians at the Hamburg State Sanatorium raised the hope that the drugs might "alter the course of the disease" by preventing the spread of lesions which they believe may be caused by an allergic reaction to the tuberculosis bacilli.

They reported preliminary findings on 30 cases treated with the allergy drugs, technically known as antihistamines. Those are the drugs used to treat hay fever, asthma and other allergies.

Writing in the Annals, official publication of the American College of Allergists, Drs. A. R. Judd and Alfred R. Henderson said in all 30 cases the patients showed "increase in weight, appetite and feeling of well-being" after treatment.

The greatest improvement, they reported, was noted in patients with tuberculosis pneumonia and other acute exudative (discharging) lesions "which in our opinion are the result of hypersensitivity."

Local Society Seeks Locale for Outing

The Unification Society, a group of business, fraternal, civic and patriotic clubs, yesterday sought the aid of Irving C. Root, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, in finding a location big enough within the park system to throw a big get-together.

The move was made after a cruise on the S. S. Bear Mountain over the weekend in which the society decided that a larger meeting place was needed, and voted to call upon Root.

Piney Point Oil Terminal Approved

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 9.—St. Marys County commissioners by a two-to-one vote today approved the construction of an oil terminal off Piney Point, Md., by L. P. Steuart & Bros., Inc.

Capt. Matthew R. Bailey, president of the board of commissioners, and Commissioner J. Frank Raley voted for the $1,250,000 project. Commissioner Frank Bailey opposed it.

Plans call for an 1100-foot wharf extending into the Potomac River, a pipeline across Piney Point Creek and installation of storage tanks on shore.

Considerable opposition has been expressed to the project by residents of the area on grounds possible oil leaks would threaten marine life, the structure would menace navigation and decrease property values.

The two approving commissioners said they didn't believe the project would harm fishing or property; would bring some $210,000 more in taxes, increase the county's property by more than one million dollars and employ some 40 to 50 men.

Dissenting Commissioner Frank Bailey said the residents in the lower part of the county should be considered since their rights would be affected.

William A. Loker, attorney, represented many of the protestants.

The plan of the company is to bring oil to the terminal in large tankers for storage and reshipment to Washington in small barges.

In another action, the commissioners refused to consider modifications of the requirement that licenses for slot machine operation be issued only to persons resident at least two years in the county. The new operator of the Gateway roadhouse had appealed denial of such a license.

Officials Talk Over Unemployment In Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 9 (AP).—Federal and State officials making a study of the serious unemployment situation in the Cumberland area met with the mayor and city council today.

Some 8000 persons are out of work in Allegany County.

One solution the six officials are studying closely is the possibility of Government aid.

The White House announced in Washington today that Government spending will be concentrated in areas where unemployment had reached 12 per cent or more. John R. Steelman, assistant to President Truman, said Cumberland probably "will fall in this category."

Shotgun Wounds Fatal to Woman; Husband Accused

The common-law wife of a Washington cab driver, in critical condition since Thursday, when she was shot with a .12-gauge shotgun, died last night at 7:40 at Casualty Hospital.

Police are holding her husband, Golding Vaughn, 39, 417 12th st. se., for assault with a dangerous weapon, and possible further charges pending action of a coroner's jury.

Police say that Vaughn shot Lucille Butler, 27, as a result of a tiff over another man. He was arrested shortly afterwards at the 12th st. address, the scene of the shooting.

Strike Ties Up French Sleeping, Dining Cars

Paris, Aug. 9 (AP).—Travelers entering France by train tonight were warned to bring their own pillows and sandwiches. The Compagnie Internationale des Wagons-Lits (International Sleeping Car Co.) estimated 3000 of its 5500 employes in France are on strike.

The strike has tied up 160 sleeping cars and 100 dining cars. Some sleeping cars are being uncoupled at the French borders, a company spokesman said, and others are going through with non-French stewards.

Strikers are asking bonuses and job reclassifications.

The Lady Denies Tale Of Plan to Wed Veep

St. Louis, Aug. 9 (AP).—Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley said tonight there is nothing to a report she and Vice President Barkley plan to be married at Paducah, Ky.—his home town—this weekend.

The same thing goes, she said, for another rumor that the wedding had been planned for the following weekend in St. Louis.

The Vice President and Mrs. Hadley attended a ball game here last Sunday. It was the Vice President's second Sunday visit to St. Louis by plane in two weeks.

China Claims Encirclement Of 11,000 Reds

Canton, Aug 9 (AP).—At least 11,000 Communist troops by official account were encircled today on the front north of Canton. If true, the Red drive on this refugee capital should be seriously blunted.

The Reds also were reported thrown back at a second point. Nationalist bombers pounded Red military trains bound for the front.

Simultaneously, official reports from the far northwest asserted 20,000 casualties were inflicted on Communist troops who have invaded Kansu Province, stronghold of Moslem Warlord Gen. Ma Hung-kwei. (Casualty reports usually are overdrawn by both sides.)

Official reports said one division and a regiment were surrounded near Suichawn, 240 miles northeast of Canton. It is on this part of the front that the Reds have made their nearest approach, 215 miles, to Canton.

The Nationalists said they had recaptured Lienhwa, 60 air miles northwest of Suichwan.

More troops of turncoat Gen. Chen Ming-jen were said to have rejoined the Nationalists. Chen's defection last week handed the central China bastion of Changsha ove rto the Reds.

In the fighting in the far northwest, the government reports conceded the Nationalists also had loost heavily.

Klipstein's subdivision of Lots in Square number Seven Hundred and Fifty-three (753) as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 20, Folio 149, beginning for the said part of Lot 163 at the northeast corner thereof and running thence east twenty-five feet, thence south nine feet, thence west twenty-five feet, thence north nine (9) feet to the beginning and known for purposes of taxation as lot numbered Eight Hundred and Two (802).

TERMS: Sold subject to a prior deed of trust for $2,560.47, further particulars of which will be announced at time of sale; the purchase price above said trust to be paid in cash. A deposit of $500 required. Conveyancing, recording, etc., at the purchaser's cost. Terms to be complied with within thirty days, otherwise deposit forfeited and the property may be advertised and resold at the discretion of the trustees.

JOSEPH A. SOLEM,
Aug. 10, 15, 19, 23. Trustees.

Fire Laid to Soldering Iron

A "live" soldering iron plugged in the second-floor stock room of the National Electronics Laboratories was blamed yesterday for the Alexandria firm's $100,000 blaze Tuesday evening.

John Posey, chief of the city's Fire Prevention Board, said inspection of the ruins yesterday disclosed a melted-down soldering iron still plugged in near the point of the origin of the flames. He said a workman remembered using the iron up to closing time, but couldn't recall whether he had shut it off or not.

District Calls Conference on Slum Funds

Spurred by a request of two Senators for action on the city's slum problem, the District Commissioners yesterday called a conference for Thursday at 10 a. m. to consider whether to apply for funds under the new National Housing Act.

The city heads will meet with John Ihlder, director, National Capital Housing Authority; John Nolen, planning director, National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Mark Lansburgh, chairman, District Redevelopment Land Agency.

Senators John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), and Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), key figures in the year-long Capitol Hill drive for slum action, asked Friday for a statement of the Commissioners' slum clearance and public housing plans over the next six years.

Two of the Commissioners are on vacation—John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner. Commissioner Guy Mason, acting president; will preside at the meeting, with Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox representing the Engineer's Department and Charles Stofberg, special assistant to J. R. Young, sitting in for him.

4-H Week Draws 905 On First Day

It was all business yesterday on the University of Maryland campus as 905 healthy 4-H Club girls and boys wound up their first day's competitions in farm lore and homemaking.

Winners of yesterday's vegetable gardening and livestock judging competitions, and canning and baking, on the distaff side, will not be announced until this morning.

Final registration figures for the State's twenty-seventh annual 4-H Club Week, which runs through an action-packed schedule until Saturday noon, showed an attendance of 598 girls and 307 boys.

Frederick County, Md., has the biggest turnout with 59 girls and 32 boys.

The club members, ranging in age from 12 to 21, are directing most of the week's activities themselves. The farm youngsters are running committees, planning the programs and even publishing a newspaper.

Taps sounded last night at 10 after a band concert and a campfire program with all the Indian rituals. Today will be another big day.

Prober Reports Racketeering in Baltimore Babies

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—An investigator said today his check on Baltimore nursing homes has turned up evidence of a mean but profitable traffic in unwanted babies.

The statement was made by Anselm Sodaro, senior assistant to the State's attorney, assigned to look into indications that a baby racket is working here.

The usual system is to get an infant from an unwed mother, on the promise to take care of it, and then get a couple to adopt the child for a fat fee, Sodaro said.

Sodaro blamed welfare agencies for failure to shut down foster homes which trade in babies. He said in many of them the infants are neglected and almost starved.

Use of Underpass To Be Restored

District Commissioners yesterday authorized resumption next month of use of a pedestrian underpass at 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., which has been closed several years following complaints that illegal acts were committed there.

The city heads will establish additional lights in the crossing and provide guards for them. Both refuse and police department will send regular patrols through the structure.

The removal of the streetcar tracks on Benning rd. posed the problem of school children being forced to cross a heavy traffic artery with no center island provided. The highway department urged removal of barricades and reuse of the crossing.

For Medal Holders

A meeting for members and associate members of the Legion of Valor and others eligible for membership will be held at 8:30 p. m. at the Admiral Robert E. Perry Legion of Veterans Post No. 427, 1300 New Hampshire ave. nw. Holders of the Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross and Navy Cross may join.

Yugoslavs Hit Repatriation Bar by Soviet

Belgrade, Aug. 9 (NYHT.).—The Yugoslav Communist government charged the Soviet Union today with acting in a manner "hitherto unknown in international relations" by refusing to allow the repatriation of 63 Yugoslav children—"between 10 and 13 years of age"—from Russia to Yugoslavia.

The Soviet regime "turned a deaf ear" to repeated requests for return of the children who are forgetting how to speak their own language while being trained as cadets in Russian military schools, the Yugoslavs said in a statement.

The children "were no longer allowed to receive letters from home nor could they communicate with their families" after Premier Marshal Tito broke with the Cominform, the statement said.

They "had to speak Russian alone" not only in their classes but "among themselves" and as a result "began to forget their mother tongue."

The boys were shipped to the Soviet Union in September, 1945, the statement said.

Observers noted that the Yugoslavs sent the children abroad for military training at an early age.

Every child grows up, but those who grow up to be the healthiest and happiest have a rich diet of active games. The most simple and common types of games known by boys and girls are the tag games. Even puppies and kittens play romping games. There is always a thrill in games where you are "it" and must run, dart, and tag another player.

For the one pursued it is exciting to know that by sidestepping, dodging and speed, you can run away from "it." There are dozens and dozens of tag games, and you can even make up your own to suit the occasion and the play area.

One of the games liked best by the children in my camp is hang tag. It is best played in a woods where there are many small trees with low branches. "It" can only tag players who are not hanging by their arms or legs with their feet off the ground. In other than wooded areas, gymnasium and playground equipment may be used. Hang around for some fun!

What's the Verdict?

BURGLARY

Q. Knowing that a neighbor family was out of town, a boy went to the house after dark, broke a hole in a screen door, unlatched the door, and went onto the porch. His intention was to steal a bicycle that he knew was kept there, but the bicycle was gone, so he left empty-handed. Is he guilty of burglary?

A. This is a good example of various technicalities involved in criminal law. At common law, burglary consisted of (1) breaking and (2) entering (3) a dwelling house of (4) another (5) in the night-time (6) with intent to commit a felony therein. By cutting the screen, lifting the latch, and walking onto the porch, which was part of the house, the boy broke and entered the dwelling house of another, in the night. If the bicycle was of sufficient value to constitute grand larceny, as was probable, then the breaking and entering was with intent to commit a felony. The fact that he didn't take anything doesn't wash out the intent with which he entered. But if he was too young (at common law, under 14) to be presumed capable of criminal intent, he would be not guilty. Modern statutes commonly eliminate the requisites of "night-time" and "dwelling," making entry of any building any time sufficient to constitute burglary . . . F. L. D.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe They Were Just Discussing a Soap Opera Plot

There's no limit to the strange things one overhears in the course of a day—or to the curiosity such fragmentary remarks arouse in me, when I can't get the rest of the story.

Marcia J. Thomas of 221 Gallatin st. nw. furnishes an excellent example. As two kindly old ladies passed her in Hecht's Silver Spring store, she heard:

"Well, she's definitely ditched him, and he's going to commit suicide. But don't tell anybody."

THE FRAIDY CATS

Mrs. D. M. Womack of Georgia Hall, Arlington, Va., suspects that we have cast unfair (if inadvertent) aspersions at the bravery of local police.

A recent news item told of a citizen's report of a holdup in these words:

CAREFUL CAB DRIVER

Reporter Dorothea Andrews flagged a cab in the northwest section the other day and indicated to the driver that she wanted to get to The Washington Post by the shortest route.

"Down 15th to the Avenue," she instructed, "and then left on the Avenue, and make a U-turn to The Post."

"Can't do it, lady," protested the driver. "It ain't allowed."

"Nonsense," replied Andy crisply. "Taxicabs U-turn there all day long."

"Maybe so," allowed the hacker, "but it's against the law. I'll go the long way around."

"Look," said our deadline-conscious reporter, "minutes are important to me, so be a good fellow and make the U-turn and if it turns out to be illegal and you get a ticket, I'll pay for it."

"No, I don't think I will," replied the driver. "You see, it ain't exactly a ticket I'm worried about . . ."

"You're afraid you'll lose your license?" asked Andy.

"Oh, no," assured the hacker. "I wouldn't lose my license—because I don't have any."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder how many people confuse the telephone numbers for Drew Pearson and Congressman Wadsworth of New York?

One is Michigan 1234 and the other is Michigan 4321—and once again I've forgotten which is which.

CONCERT SCHEDULE

A. Tino of 120 C st. ne. wonders whether we can publish a schedule of the concerts to be given on the Capitol steps, and David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol, supplies the following answer:

Between now and August 29, four concerts will be given each week; Monday by the Navy Band, Wednesday by the Marines, Friday by the Army and Sunday by the Air Force. All concerts start at 8 p. m.

Televiewers might be interested to know that the Marine Band is on WNBW Saturdays, at 8 p. m.

ADD SIGNS

I. Fellman of Colorado Terrace nw. reports that at the Golden Gate Race Track out in sunny California, he saw this sign:

For Rent
BINOCULARS

GIVE-AWAYS

"Housebroken black-and-white male kitten, 6 weeks old. Will deliver." (Wisconsin 7508.)

"Two very cute, healthy playful kittens." (Decatur 9682.)

"Large-size rural mail box." (Sligo 9495.)

"Small, gentle German shepherd female; frisky, medium-sized wire-haired terrier; large, short-haired bird terrier, gentle and friendly." (Owens 6055.)

RUBBING IT IN

Newspaper picture editors must be a sadistic lot. When there's snow on the ground, they show us snapshots of the Nats basking in Florida. When we're baking in the summer heat, they dote on pictures of the Redskins.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Harriet K. Doyle of 1731 Lyman pl. ne. slyly asks whether we've heard about the new "picket fence bathing suits." She explains:

"They protect the property, but don't obstruct the view."

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

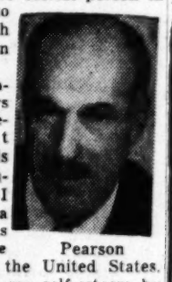
Pearson Tosses In the Towel

By Drew Pearson

Maybe I shouldn't admit it, but I've been having increasing trouble with my wife lately. Usually she is the easiest person in the world to get along with—but not in August.



Pearson

Every summer she labors under the delusion that Washington is not cool in August and that I can write a column just as well from some other part of the United States. She even jolts my self-esteem by insinuating that the world would get along just as well if no column was written at all—for a while.

In vain do I argue that someone has to keep an eye on the lobbyists and the legislators. It does no good. The 5-percenters could run off with the United States Treasury and Mrs. P. just wouldn't worry about it if the thermometer was above 80.

In vain, also, do I scan the weather reports and gloat over the fact that it's been 97 in New York, 96 in Philadelphia, 99 in Nebraska and only 95 in Washington. Washington, I argue, is a much cooler place. But it makes no difference.

"We don't have to go to New York, Philadelphia or Nebraska," Mrs. P. replies. "There are other places in the United States besides New York, Philadelphia or Nebraska. Also, there's Canada."

Obviously I can't win. I should have known this from previous summers. But there is nothing more unwise than a stubborn husband, so I resorted to delaying tactics. I got out the railroad and airplane timetables and left them in a conspicuous place in the living room. It did no good. Mrs. P. wanted a date, the exact time, the hour, the name of the hotel, the time of the train's departure. I even told her that Bob Allen was busy and wasn't ready yet to take over the column. She didn't swallow that one either.

So this is to announce that having reached the end of my domestic rope, this will be the last column to be foisted on a hot and helpless public until September. The best reporter in Washington, Bob Allen, has been kind enough to take over until then.

Keeping Score on Truman

Before I close the season's score, however, there are a couple of points I would like to set straight. If anything should happen to me I would not want the wrong impression to prevail about certain people.

For instance, I have been pretty rough on some of the White House hangers-on who influence President Truman. But while I deplore the choice of these White House cronies, I continue to applaud most of Truman's legislative program.

The President is sincere, honest, diligent, sometimes vindictive, frequently impulsive, and not always efficient. But history will show that 90 per cent of the time he has been fighting for the little fellow—and that's a lot more than can be said of some Presidents.

Byrnes and Truman

Some time ago I wrote a column about the differences between President Truman and former Secretary of State Byrnes in which I reported that Mr. Truman had become irked at Mr. Byrnes just a week or so before he resigned, and that Byrnes' resignation, which he himself had planned for some time, had been hastened by that irritation.

Mr. Byrnes has now written me that the latter part of this column was incorrect and that Mr. Truman was not irked. I regret this error, and am glad to make the correction.

I should like further to repeat what I have written before, that in my opinion Jimmie Byrnes resigned just when he was striking his real stride as a great Secretary of State.

I have always felt that the country would have been much better off if he had continued in office; for General Marshall, fine and sincere as he is, had to unlearn the military habits of a lifetime—which was not easy. Thus for a year or more the Nation marked time when it should have been marching forward on the road to peace.

Will Clark Be Liberal?

Some Republican Senators, plus certain newspapers, have been panning Tom Clark, the Attorney General. They claim he is a politician, a hack lawyer and no addition to the Supreme Court.

I think they're wrong. Tom Clark has his faults, and some eccentricities. He looks like a politician, he talks like a politician, but when the chips are down he's a tough, go-through fighter, with a pretty consistent record of battling for the little guy.

When Tom first became Attorney General, critics said he wouldn't have the nerve to go after the big monopolies. Thurman Arnold's trust-busting, they said, would come to a dead halt. But Tom fooled 'em. He has brought twice as many antitrust cases as any other Attorney General—including the case to break up the duPont empire, one of the toughest ever to come out of the Justice Department.
